FLEE WITH THE STOLEN BOY TO ESCAPE BOMB

SHARON, Pa., March 31.—Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Whitla, parents of the kidnapped boy, fearing that their home will be dynamited, departed secretly last night for Atlantic City.

The Federal Government stepped into the kidnapping case to-day when postoffice inspectors began a hunt for the author of threatening letters received by Whitla, all of which promise to visit vengeance upon him if he does not drop the prosecution of the Boyles or furnish $5,000 for their defence. More than a score of such letters have been received since the arrest of the Boyles.

At Mercer Mrs. James Boyle was arraigned before Justice McLain. She waived a hearing and was held to await the action of the April Grand Jury. Bail was fixed at the same amount as in her husband's case, $25,000. When asked by the justice if she could furnish bail she replied: "Not that I know of."

That she was to be given a hearing was kept secret and only a half dozen people were present in the court. She was attired in a light tan coat and wore a veil. She spoke pleasantly to a number whom she recognized in the court room.

Thomas C. Cochran appeared for the prosecution.

Nothing new has developed regarding the stranger who visited the jail Monday during Sheriff Chess's absence. Attorney Cochran believes the stranger was an attorney, who had been employed by some influential friends of Mrs. Boyle.

Mrs. Boyle's identity remains a mystery so far as the local authorities are concerned.

The case took on an additional tinge of mystery to-day, when Mrs. Boyle was permitted to waive a hearing before the justice of the peace at Sharon by simply signing a paper to that effect in the Mercer Jail.

Now it will not be necessary for the woman to appear in Sharon at all though it is said scores of people would recognize her were she but permitted to go into that town.

That James Whitla and his close friends have been desirous of keeping the woman out of Sharon since her arrest seems to be the conviction of many in Mercer County.

CROWDS OUT TO SEE WHITLAS ON WAY TO PLACE OF SAFETY

PHILADELPHIA, March 31.—Willie Whitla, son of James P. Whitla, spent two hours here to-day on his way to Atlantic City, where his parents intend to seek relief from the strain of the kidnapping and subsequent threats to blow up their home. In the party were the father of the boy, the latter's mother, his sister, Selina, and another boy and girl whose names the Whitlas refused to divulge, saying that they were "friends of the family."

Before the train left for Atlantic City the news that the kidnapped boy and his parents were in the station attracted a crowd. The railroad officials, learning of the embarrassment of the Whitlas, opened a parlor car ahead of the schedule time, and there the party was safe from further annoyance.

ALL CENTRAL AMERICA ON VERGE OF WAR

MEXICO CITY, March 31.—A private cable says Guatemala has moved a large force of troops to the Honduran border. The Honduran Minister has demanded an explanation and has been informed by President Cabrera that the troops are being rushed eastward to check the culmination of the revolutionary plot hatched by Honduran exiles on Guatemalan territory having for its purpose the overthrow of President Devila of Honduras.

It is believed that Cabrera is preparing to check an invasion and that the long expected clash between Cabrera and Zelaya is about to occur. War within ten days is the prediction of the emigrado colony here.

Domination of Central America is to be the issue and Cabrera and Zelaya main combatants. In this connection the dispatching of 400 troops southwest by the war department last night from Vera Cruz in a special train is attracting interest.

VIADUCT BLOWN UP

NEW YORK, March 31.—Six persons were injured and several houses in Hoboken partly demolished to-day by the explosion of a nitro-glycerine bomb which had been placed under the new $350,000 traffic viaduct that is being built to connect West Hoboken and Hoboken. The police declared that the bomb had been set off with the intention of wrecking the viaduct.

The injured are Frederick Pilgrim, fifteen years old, No. 358 Fourteenth street, buried beneath furniture overturned by the explosion, cut and bruised; Mrs. Mary Devine, No. 1,406 Clinton street, thrown from her bed and severely bruised; Harry Grippenberg, No. 1,406 Clinton street, hurled from bed and bruised; Mrs. Rose Young, No. 358 Fourteenth street, struck by flying missile and cut about head.

The explosion was heard in lower Manhattan and Jersey City. Representatives of the McClintee & Marshall Construction Company, contractors for the work, declare that several days ago the firm received letters in which threats to destroy the viaduct were made.

When the police were informed of threatening letters they said the contractors were partly to blame for the affair, as they should have asked for patrolmen to guard the viaduct.

At No. 358 Fourteenth street Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pilgrim and their seven children were thrown from their beds by the shock and every window in the house was shattered. A piece of iron six inches square crashed through the wall into the parlor and then through a partition into a bedroom, just missing Mrs. Pilgrim's head

Mrs. James H. Boyle (at top), woman held in kidnapping case, and James H. Boyle, her "pal," seated between the sheriff and his deputy in an automobile.

WIRELESS GREETING TO ROOSEVELT

ROME, March 31.—Lloyd C. Griscom, American Ambassador to Italy, has sent the following message of greeting by wireless to Theodore Roosevelt, on board the steamship Hamburg, due at Gibraltar to-morrow:

> Accept this first greeting from your countrymen in Europe. I deeply regret that the essentially private nature of your journey makes you decline all honors and prompts you to avoid the public enthusiasm which would have had such an admirable effect in emphasizing the good relations between Italy and the United States.
>
> I profit by the inventive genius of a great Italian to send you, while you are at sea, a welcome message from Italy.
>
> With every good wishes from your devoted friends,
>
> LLOYD C. GRISCOM.

A message from Naples says every precaution will be taken to guard ex-President Roosevelt from harm during his brief stay here.

He will be protected by a corps of bicycle police under command of Commissioner Mezzacapo, who is a nephew of the noted General Carlo Mezzacapo.

Mr. Roosevelt will reach here Sunday and arrangements have been made for the sailing of the steamer Admiral, on which he will travel from this port to Mombassa, at midnight Monday.

The reports of the attempt made on his life on the steamer Hamburg have aroused great indignation here.

A dispatch from Messina says there is lively anticipation over the proposed visit of ex-President Roosevelt there. He is expected to arrive Tuesday morning, and probably will visit the American quarter, which consists of wooden houses sent from the United States.

200 MEN ARMED TO BATTLE WITH MINERS

JASONVILLE, Md., March 31.—Two hundred American miners, armed, left Jasonville to-day for the Bogle Mines to repel 150 Hungarian miners said to be approaching the shaft with the intention of dynamiting it.

Before daylight shots were heard and the distress signal had been blown repeatedly by men at the shaft. Hungarians have cut the telephone wires to the mine. The sheriffs of Green and Clay Counties, with large posses, have gone to the scene.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT—Character study by Alfred Henry Lewis in next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN. It shows the kind of man the new President is.

TAFT OFFERS LONDON POST TO DR. ELIOT

WASHINGTON, March 31.—President Taft informed Dr. Eliot, president of Harvard University, to-day that he wished him to represent this country as ambassador to England, beginning next Autumn or early next Winter. The tender of the most important position abroad within the President's gift was made at the White House.

It is understood that Dr. Eliot gave no positive answer, but took the matter under advisement. The President gained the impression that Dr. Eliot would be able to accept and that the prospect of Ambassador Reid remaining for several months yet would give Dr. Eliot time to arrange his affairs at Cambridge with a view to a four years' stay at London.

The conference, lasting a half hour, was the outcome meeting of Persident Taft and Dr. Eliot at teh dinner of the Washington Harvard Club at the Raleigh.

When Dr. Eliot left the White House he stated that he had nothing to say about the ambassadorship. The formal word given out at the White House offices was that President Taft had nothing to say.

It is known, however, that President Taft explained the situation to Dr. Eliot and offered him the ambassadorship. He told his visitor that Mr. Reid wanted to remain through the approaching social season at London, and that he was disposed to allow him to serve out four full years. It is not customary to hurry a retiring ambassador. He is allowed to consult his own convetence to some extent.

The nomination of Dr. Eliot, if he decides to accept, probably will not be sent to the Senate till next December.

MOTHER FINDS SONS LOST FOR 7 YEARS

Mrs. Mary McCarron of No. 5 Sterling street, Malden, is to-day the happiest mother in New England, for she has found her two sons who were lost to her for more than seven years. She asked the BOSTON AMERICAN to try to find her boys for her. The young men were found in San Francisco, and they at once wrote their mother, for they had also been trying to find her. Mrs. McCarron is now preparing for a great family reunion, for her sons are coming from the West to visit her in June.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

TRAIN CRASHES INTO BOULDER; WRECK AFIRE

SALT LAKE CITY, March 31.—Rushing westward at a terrific speed, Union Pacific passenger train No. 3 crashed into a huge boulder, which had slid from the top of the mountain, and was wrecked early to-day, a mile and a half west of Castle Rock, Utah, and just sixteen miles east of Ogden.

Five cars, including the baggage, mail and three passenger coaches, caught fire and burned.

The engine turned over and rolled down an embankment.

S. G. Lowham, fireman, and S. J. Gordon, baggageman, are known to have been killed. Lowham is the last of four brothers killed on the Union Pacific in two years.

A special train left Ogdon carrying all the available nurses and doctors to the scene of the wreck.

ROOSEVELT HIT HARD BY MILES

FITCHBURG, March 31.—That a man who would shoot an elephant must have a depraved mind was the declaration of General Nelson A. Miles to-day. The general was visiting his brother, Daniel C. Miles.

"I never could see," said the general, "why a man wants to shoot elephants, zebras, antelopes and other animals wilfully. I believe that a man who shoots an elephant must have a depraved mind. Elephants are so useful to us, you know, for they are put to work at so many things. Why, shooting at an elephant is just like pouring shot into the side of a barn.

"It is really too bad to kill them. The British government has recently passed a law setting apart a large tract of land in Africa for reservation purposes and for the protection of elephants, zebras, antelopes and ostriches and other animals that live in that section. It's a pity that a man should find enjoyment in shooting at such animals to kill them."

NO STRIKE, SAYS LEWIS TO COAL OPERATORS

NEW YORK, March 31.—Thomas L. Lewis, president of the Mine Workers' Union, to-day sent a letter to each of the "Big Seven"—the leading mine operators—declaring that there would be no immediate coal strike, if at all.

The men, according to the letter, are willing to continue work under the agreement, which expired to-day, pending further conferences. The next will be held in Philadelphia, April 7

CORKS KILL DOG VALUED AT $10,000

CHICAGO, March 31.—The noted French bulldog Marshal Ney II., owned by Lincoln Bartlett and valued at $10,000, is dead. The dog swallowed several corks and died of acute peritonitis.

'I LOVE HIM' SAYS CHIN'S WHITE WIFE

Mrs. Chin Wah Lee.

"I do not see why a white girl who marries a Chinaman should not be accorded the same respect that is given to any other girl who marries any other man."

That was the declaration to-day of pretty Mrs. Chin Wah Lee, the nineteen-year-old wife of a Chinese laundryman at No. 23 Tyler street, in discussing the actions of a crowd that hooted and jeered her in West Newton while she was in company with Charlie Chin, a cousin of her husband.

The young woman had gone to West Newton and was about to take a train back to Boston when the crowd began to gather on seeing a white girl with a Chinaman. They yelled and crowded about the couple in such a manner that it appeared that they were about to offer them violence.

"You get on the train," the woman told her companion. He did so. Then turning and facing the crowd, Mrs. Lee declared:

"I am a respectable married woman. My husband is a Chinaman. You ought to be ashamed of yourselves to act in this heathenish manner."

Discussing the incident to-day Mrs. Lee said:

> I married my husband because I loved him and I love him still. He is good and kind and provides me a good home. I was mistreated by a lot of roughs. They ought to have been arrested.
>
> I am a respectable woman. If I wanted to marry a Chinaman I think that is my business. It is a shame that an American girl can not marry whom she chooses without being insulted in the street.
>
> I shall not take any measures to have the West Newton hoodlums punished, but I want to say that their conduct deserves rebuke a great deal more than mine.

HARVARD DEFI TO OXFORD UNCREDITED

LONDON, March 31.—It is reported here that Harvard University has sent a challenge to Oxford for an eight-oared rowing race in September.

Those in touch with rowing affairs say it would be quite possible for Harvard to race Oxford this Fall, but it would be unusual to issue a challenge until the Harvard-Yale race is held. Winning from Yale, the Harvard crew would be in position to challenge Oxford, but hardly before that.

NEW YORK TRIES "CAR FOR WOMEN"

NEW YORK, March 31.—"This car exclusively for ladies," was the sign hung out to-day for the first time in the history of New York transportation. The last cars on all trains from Hoboken in the Hudson tunnel were reserved for women, and the results were gratifying, in spite of the public's unfamiliarity with the plan.

"It is only a matter of time when the public will be entirely accustomed to the idea," said Mr. McAdoo. "The experiment has been more successful than we anticipated."

INSPECTORS HOLD UP WESTERN CATTLE

Rigid inspection of the slaughter houses at Brighton was begun by local inspectors when they condemned a number of Western cattle and hogs that had been passed by United States inspectors and the Jewish religious inspectors. Following this several of the proprietors suspended killing, and they declare that if the present stand of the city is maintained they will have to stop business altogether.

SCIENTIST SLAIN BY SAVAGES

MANILA, March 31.—Word has been received of the murder of Dr. William Jones was studying the wild tribes of Filipinos for the Field Museum of Natural History of Chicago.

The murder occurred at Dumobato at the headquarters of the Cagayan River, in Isabella Province. No details of the attack have been obtainable thus far, but it is supposed that the scientist was killed by wild tribesmen.

Dr. Jones had been in the Philippines two years and was nearly ready to submit an exhaustive report.

For several months he had been studying the Ilongots, living among them in the hills.

The Government will send a party from Echague, the nearest post to Dumobato, to investigate.

Professor Frederick Ward Putnam of the Peabody Museum of Harvard College, who knew Dr. William Jones very intimately, said:

"I knew Dr. Jones very well. He was an American Indian of the Fox tribe. He was a graduate of the Carlisle Indian School and came to Harvard about ten years ago. He was graduated from Harvard College in 1900 as an A. B. Immediately afterward he went to Columbia College, where he obtained the degree of A. M. in 1901. At the same college in 1904 he obtained the degree Ph. D. He made a specialty of studying the Indian languages, and especially the Algonquin tongue.

"He was very much interested in the study of anthropology, and has published a volume by the American Anthropological Society, whose title, I believe, is 'Folklore of the Sacs and Fox Indians.'

"Several years ago he was engaged to be married to a Miss Andrews of Carlisle, and it was his intention to marry upon his return from the Philippines.

"I have not seen him since three years ago, when he went to accept a position with the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago. He was a very ardent student and worker in his chosen work, very modest and very much liked here while at Harvard.

"His death, if true, is very much of a shock to us all here."

SUFFRAGETTES AGAIN ROUTED

LONDON, March 31.—Undaunted by their unsuccessful raid upon the House of Parliament yesterday afternoon the suffragettes made another attempt to-day to storm the building and enter by the main entrance, but were forced back by the police.

Since the demonstration yesterday the House has been guarded by police, and to-day when the women attempted to force their way in, they found the passage blocked. There was the usual demonstration of speeches, flag waving and muddied frocks. Many of the women lost hats and jackets and others attempted to fight their way through the line of police by strenuous means.

Ten of the women arrested yesterday were sentenced to four weeks' imprisonment to-day, refusing to be bound over.

SHAKEUP AT CUSTOM HOUSE

Surveyor of the Port Jeremiah J. McCarthy to-day announced the transfer of seventy-eight employes of the custom house to other departments and the reduction of wages of the four weighers in charge and of the men in the classified labor division.

The four weighers in charge are Charles R. Safford, David E. Tyler, Thomas H. Welsh and John McForley, who by the reduction, according to a ruling from Washington, will receive $140 less a year. A number of men classed as laborers will receive $72 less a year. Collector Lyman will try to have a new ruling regarding the weighers.

This is the biggest shakeup that has taken place in the custom house service in many years. It was forecasted a month ago when twenty-six other men were transferred. Mr. McCarthy announced at the time that he would make the changes which will go into effect to-morrow.

WOMAN GOES THROUGH FIRE, SAVES BABIES

LYNN, March 31.—To the heroism of Mrs. Annie Hall of No. 53 Elm street, this city, two children of Mr. and Mrs. William Finn, who live in the third floor apartments of the same house, owe their lives to-day. In rescuing the children Mrs. Hall risked her own life. At the same time her daughter, Mrs. Bertie Lamson, rushed from the house and rang in the fire alarm in time for the firemen to save the house.

William Flinn is a shoe worker. To-day he left home early for work as usual. Later in the day his wife left her two children, Mildred, aged six, and Maynard, four, alone in the flat. "Take good care of Maynard," she said to the little girl as she left to go to a store.

Mrs. Hall came upstairs to see how the little ones were getting along. She found they were playing with matches. She warned them and went back to her work. She forgot the children until she smelled smoke in the hall and heard the crackling of flames.

Calling out to Mrs. Lamson to turn in the alarm, Mrs. Hall rushed up the stairs and into the bedroom where the children were. The room was almost filled with flames and through the fire and smoke the brave woman saw the two children huddled in a corner, paralyzed with fear.

She snatched them up and rushed down stairs and up into the street just as the fire department responded. The apartments of the Flinn family are damaged to about $1,000.

GIRL BITTEN BY TWO BULLDOGS SAVED BY BOY

Elsie cDonald Bremner, ten years of age, of No. 8 arion street, Somerville, is today suffering from a dozen bites and many scratches, which she received when two savage bulldogs sprang upon her. She was rescued by Redford Comfort, a twelve-year-old schoolmate.

Elsie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Bremner. Late yesterday afternoon she was playing hide and seek with several of her little friends. She ran into the yard at No. 6. Just as she did so two savage bulldogs flew at her.

Both brutes seized her by the left leg and began clawing and biting, trying to drag her down. Had she not clung to the fence the dogs would have succeeded. She shrieked for help and young Comfort and several other boys ran to help her. Comfort threw stones and got a club and beat the dogs off.

Mrs. Bremner came just then and hurried her little daughter to the Cambridge Relief Hospital where a dozen wounds made by the fangs of the dogs were cauterized. To-day the mother took her daughter back to the hospital and she was told that the child might have to be taken to the City Hospital for the Pasteur treatment.

SHOOTS SELF WHEN WIFE TRIES TO DIE

While William Suzynski, a Polander, is to-day lying at the Cambridge Relief Hospital with a self-inflicted bullet wound in his head, his wife, Veronica, is at the point of death in the Brockton Hospital from carbolic acid which she drank on March 20. Remorse, because he thought he had driven his wife to try to kill herself led the man to seek death yesterday.

"Curses on my husband," she wrote her husband. "Curses on him and his brother John. They have led me such a life. He makes me like a prisoner. He don't love my children. He don't give them no money. Because he don't do anything but drink. I ask the police if they would be so kind to bring him to justice. I don't want the husband or any of his relatives to come to the funeral. I am very sorry for the children, because they don't speak English. I ask the police to enforce the law."

This note was found in the pocket of a coat of the man after he left Brockton. His children were sent to Cambridge to the home of Suzynski's sister.

The man employed at the M. A. Packard shoe factory in Brockton as a laster. He and his wife had lived in Brockton for five years. No one knew that they quarrelled until the day the wife tried to take her own life. She rushed into the yard and drank carbolic acid from a cup as her husband dashed after her.

TWO WOMEN RESCUED AT EARLY FIRE

Two women were rescued early this morning in a fire at No. 1 Emerald street, South End.

The fire threatened to sweep through the entire building. It menanced the lives of over a score of occupants of the house.

The women were taken from the building in an unconscious condition by John J. Horan, aged twenty-one, of No. 14 Emerald street, who fought his way through flames and smoke to the top story.

The women saved are Mrs. Annie Keyes and her daughter, Nellie. Both were overcome by the smoke. They are cousins of Horan.

It was necessary for Horan to break open the door of the tenement occupied by the Keyes's before he could reach the imperilled women. Then, with the unconscious forms of mother and daughter held tightly in his arms, he staggered down the steep stair to the street.

Living on the first floor of the building was Mrs. Grace Fuller, while Mrs. Jennie Braman occupied the tenement on the second floor. They were aroused from their sleep by Horgan.

The fire started in a closet on the third floor and burned its way through the roof, filling the halls and living rooms with dense smoke. It was necessary for Horgan to pass through the very heart of the flames to reach the Keys family. He is a cousin of the women he rescued.

When found, both mother and daughter lay on the bed overcome by smoke, and their death was only a question of moments had Heran not made his hazardous trip through the flames to effect their rescue.

Patrolman Daniel Sullivan, seeing the fire bursting through the roof of the tenement house, rung in an alarm.

Learning from others that there were women living on the top floor of the burning building, the firemen were hastening toward the splintered door prepared to risk their lives in an attempt to rescue them, when Horgan, his clothes ablaze and his hair singed, came staggering down the stairway with a woman on each arm.

The property loss was slight.

WIFE, ILL, SAYS LUMBER DEALER NEGLECTS HER

The separate maintenance case of Mrs. Alice K. Crossman of Newton against her husband, Fred A. Crossman of Kingsfield, Maine, was before Justice George F. Lawton in the East Cambridge Probate Court to-day. The petitioned charged cruel and abusive treatment and neglect of herself and children, Alfred H., aged fifteen; Mortimer B., aged twelve, and Ruth, aged eight.

Mrs. Crossman is the daughter of ex-Mayor J. M. W. Hall of Cambridge, while the husband is a lumber dealer. They were married in June, 1893, at the Shepard Memorial Church of Cambridge. Boston and Cambridge society was well represented. The couple lived in Providence for a time, then for ten years in Cambridge and afterward in Kingsfield, Maine.

Mr. Crossman was greatly affected at certain stages of the hearing. Mrs. Crossman was absent, ill and almost hysterical, as was represented. Her depositions were presented to Justice Lawton and held for the exclusive eye of the court and the attorneys.

Dr. John T. Nichols of Cambridge, family physician, testified that the husband had confidentially declared to him that the wife was one of the sweetest women in the world if she were let alone by her family. At this the husband buried his face in his hands and sobbed.

A deposition from Ernest Green, a Providence student, was in effect that Mrs. Green was a fine woman, but that her husband neglected her, the children and his home.

Dr. Robert Loring of Newton, now attending Mrs. Crossman, said she was suffering from nervous breakdown. In his opinion it would be unsafe to remove the children from her, lest insanity should follow. He said she should be cared for by nerve specialists.

Surgeons Move Heart of Peeress.

LONDON. Lying on a kitchen table in a humble farmhouse near Market Drayton, Viscountess Crichton, wife of the equerry of the Prince of Wales, daughter of the first Duke of Westminster and one of the richest members of the English nobility, awaits to-day an extraordinary surgical operation.

The Viscountess, while following the hounds, was thrown from her horse and gravely injured. She was carried to a farmhouse near the scene of the accident, and special trains from London brought the ablest physicians and surgeons of England to attend her ladyship. It was found impossible to remove her from the farmhouse, and after a consultation it was decided to attempt an extraordinary surgical operation—nothing less than moving the heart.

A broken rib which has been forced inward has to be moved so that the heart which it has pressed out of place can be restored to its normal position. After this difficult operation a still more momentous one for spinal injury will have to be performed.

American Dead in Mystery.

PARIS—The body of a man of about fifty years of age, who was known as Donald Farquharson and also as Fleurot and who is believed to have been an American, was found in an apartment on the sixth story of a house in Mont Thabor street, which runs back of the Meurice and Continental Hotels. The furniture of the room looked as if it had been thrown about and an empty revolver lay near the body. Farquharson had been seen entering the house in company with a young man, of whom no particular notice seems to have been taken. Farquharson is supposed to have been a lawyer. He called himself a journalist and dramatic author.

Suffragettes in Court.

LONDON—Eleven suffragettes who took part in yesterday's raid upon the House of Parliament building were arraigned today in the Bow Street Police Court. True to their principles the women refused to pay the fines which were imposed upon them.

A large crowd gathered to watch the proceedings and several times the women became so noisy that they had to be admonished by the court.

Berlin Suffragettes Peaceful.

BERLIN—Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt's suffragette demonstration was a fizzle. About 300 women and 100 men were present. The doors were guarded by police, but there was neither excitement nor enthusiasm. Mrs. Catt spoke in English amid respectful silence. Minna Cauer, a belligerent female Socialist, presided.

More Duty on Pineapples.

SAN JUAN, P. R.—The Horticultural Society, composed of fruit growers, who represent property worth over $1,000,000, has cabled to the United States District Judge B. S. Rodey, who is now visiting Washington, asking him to represent it before Congress to secure an increased duty in foreign pineapples.

Von Buelow Won't Resign.

BERLIN—Chancellor von Buelow was in a fighting mood when he spoke in the Reichstag on the dissensions in the Government bloc. He said he had not the slightest intention of resigning and meant to keep his post as Chancellor as long as he possessed, as he did now, the full confidence of the Kaiser.

So little were party contentions troubling him, he said, that he spent the night in reading Goethe, from whom he gave some quotations to the House.

COFFEE TAX CONDEMNED IN TARIFF TALK

WASHINGTON, March 31.—In the House to-day Representative Morgan of Missouri, who was elected to Congress on a protective tariff issue, strongly urged a protective duty on zinc ore that would prevent the importations from Mexico. There is plenty of zinc ore in his district, he said, and all that is required to develop the industry is a protective tariff.

Representative Douglas argued against the countervailing duty on coffee. He said the people would not approve of the tax on coffee while the countervailing duty would be a tax because other countries could not abolish their export duty.

Representative Brantley, after saying that the Payne bill had been prepared by the majority members of the Ways and Means Committee in secret conference, declared it was reported to the House before the minority members had an opportunity to study it. He criticised the Republicans for their excessive appropriations and said: "We are now spending more money than any other country in the world." The point has been raised, he said, that it will be necessary to issue bonds to meet the expenses of the government.

Representative Rothermel tried to prove the paper manufacturers had formed a combination in restraint of trade, and reading records to show there was a paper trust. He said it came with bad grace for men engaged in a trust to ask for a protection on wood pulp and paper.

Representative Lovering of Massachusetts said the tariff bill was not satisfactory to everybody, but the committee had kept the pledges of the Republican party and the measure came nearer being a satisfactory revenue and protective measure than any tariff bill ever presented. He intends to support it with such amendments as the committee may make.

One of the leading features of the Payne bill, he said, was the drawback which enabled manufacturers to use foreign material in the manufacture of articles for export free of duty.

SIX BULLETS FOR SUICIDE, STILL LIVES

William B. Stoehr, fifty years of age, of No. 10 Shawmut street, early to-day shot himself six times, five bullets entering his breast and one penetrating his right ear. He is at the City Hospital and is expected to die.

Stoehr, who is employed at the Whiting brush factory in Harrison avenue, has been suffering from a throat disease for some months and was despondent.

Frank Felton heard pistol shots and summoned Policeman Patrick W. Horan. They found Stoehr, a revolver in his hand, and his clothes on fire, lying on the steps of the rear of the Berkeley Building in Providence street. They finally had to secure a bucket of water to extinguish the flames.

In the man's pockets were cards which read:

> In case of my death have Undertaker Jones take charge of my body.
>
> You will find my will in my trunk and money in the Five Cents Savings Bank.

Mrs. James Thompson of No. 10 Shawmut street said:

> Stoehr was a man of mystery. He lodged here for the last five years, but we know little of him.
>
> He did not have a caller while he lodged with us and never received a letter. Whatever business he had he kept to himself.
>
> He worked steadily. I don't know of any acquaintances he had. He would come in here every evening at 7 o'clock and go right to his room, where he would sit and read for a short time and then go to bed. Promptly at 6 o'clock in the morning he would leave for his work. About all he ever told us about himself was that he was unmarried.

PEACE ENVOYS OF A. O. H. GIVEN GLAD SEND-OFF

Matthew Cummings, national president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, accompanied by Rev. Philip J. O'Donnell, pastor of St. Philip's Church, state chaplain of the order, will leave the South Station on Friday by the 1 o'clock limited express for New York. On Saturday morning they sail for Ireland, where they will endeavor to carry out the mission entrusted to them at the last national convention held in Indianapolis of harmonizing the relations between the organization in the mother country and the United States. They expect to be away two months.

The friends of Mr. Cummings are treating him to a round of farewell gatherings as the time of his departure approaches. Prominent among these was that of the Ladies' Auxiliary, No. 18, A. O. H., which held a banquet in Odd Fellows Hall, Neponset, in honor of Mr. Cummings and his fellow delegate. The Rev. J. H. McCone, pastor of St. Anne's Church, presided, and the speakers included the Rev. Philip J. O'Donnell, the Rev D. J. Wholey, the Rev. F. Dermody, the Rev. James Flannery, Mrs. Ellen Ryan Jolly, State President of Rhode Island; Mrs. E. M. Murphy, Suffolk County President, A. O. H., and Peter Fallon.

Mr. Cummings's Neponset neighbors called him to a farewell gathering in Kelliher's Hall and presented him with a handsome alligator travelling bag.

BERTHA KRUPP, HEIRESS, WORLD'S RICHEST BRIDE TIRES OF MARRIED LIFE

Official portrait of Bertha Krupp von Bohlen und Holbach, Germany's richest woman, and man she is about to sue for divorce.

HAMBURG, March 31.—Frau Bertha Krupp von Bohlen und Holbach, the $100,000,000 heiress of the famous gun maker of Essen, is contemplating a divorce suit against her husband, according to reports from that city.

For months their living together, the reports have it, has been for appearance sake only. Frau von Bohlen has consulted lawyers, it is known, and they say her application for freedom is only a matter of time.

The mistress of the famous gun works is conceded to be the richest woman in the world, and her prospective divorce is to-day the talk of all Germany.

Herr and Frau Von Bohlen have been living unhappily for more than a year, it is said, in Essen, where their magnificent home is located. In February their second child died. That meant the breaking of the last link that kept them together.

When she met Dr. Gustave von Bohlen und Holbach he was a secretary of the Prussian legation at the Vatican. He was poor but talented, thirty-five years old, and their engagement was universally proclaimed to be the climax of a love match pure and simple.

"Incompatibility," as the Americans would phrase it, seems to be the trouble. That is, no other cause has been mentioned. No other woman, according to present information, appears in the case. The Von Bohlens were married in October, 1906.

At that time the then Fraulien Krupp was only eighteen years old, but for six years previously she had been the mistress of the most famous gun and armor plant in the world.

Her father, the great gunmaker, bequeathed to her his works at Essen, while to her mother and sisters he left immense blocks of stocks and real estate. Bertha's share was frequently appraised at $100,000,000.

Their marriage was one of the most notable events of years in German social circles. Kaiser Wilhelm attended, as did many other notables and nobles. He gave imperial permission for the bride to incorporate her own name with that of her husband in her title after she was married.

COURT TAKES UP NORDICA WILL FIGHT

A conference was held to-day before Judge George F. Lawton in the Middlesex County Probate Court in East Cambridge in regard to the contest of the will of Mrs. Vannie F. Allen. Madame Lillian Nordica is one of the contestants for the estate of over $100,000. Other contestants are Mrs. Imogene A. Costillo of Los Angeles; Mrs. Ione A. Walker of New York, and Mrs. Anna M. Baldwin of this city. All are nieces and were cut off by Mrs. Allen, their aunt, because "they had sufficient of this world's goods."

Attorney George Libby of Richardson & Libby appeared to-day to defend the will. Judge Enos T. Luce of Waltham appeared for Mrs. Anna Hernandez of Waltham, one of the legatees. Attorney Robert W. Light appeared for Benjamin Geyer of Marshfield, a half-brother of Mrs. Allen.

Mr. Light argued for delay. Mr. Libby opposed this. To keep the case in its place on the docket the attorneys agreed to appear in court to-morrow to further discuss the case. They will then suggest that the Judge appoint Alexander McGregor a special administrator to handle the estate pending a legal settlement of the dispute.

Neither Madame Nordica nor Mrs. Costillo of Los Angeles were present in court to-day.

SAYS ELOPING PREACHER HELD WIFE IN SPELL

The Rev. Charles Walter Dane, pastor of the Woodbury, Ct., Methodist Church, has eloped, it is alleged, with Mrs. George N. Proctor, wife of a wealthy merchant of Waterbury, Ct. Mrs. Carrie Dane, wife of the missing clergyman, arrived in Boston to-day. She came here to see her mother, Mrs. Helen Curry of Malden.

George Proctor, the Waterbury merchant, declares that the clergyman stole his wife from him.

"My wife was hypnotized by Dane," he said to-day. "I told my wife this would be the outcome. He wove a spell about her that she could not resist. I will find him if it takes every cent I have in the world."

"I cannot believe these dreadful things," said Mrs. Curry, mother of Mrs. Dane, at her Malden home. "I knew that my daughter might be coming home, but I thought it was only for a visit. This is the first time I ever had a suspicion that my daughter and her husband were not just as happy as they were fourteen years ago when they were wedded."

Police Asked to Find Wife

On Sunday the pastor announced that he would make an explanation regarding his domestic affairs that night. Instead he disappeared from Woodbury, which is a suburb of Waterbury. All sorts of conjectures were made, especially as Mrs. Dane left the Connecticut city a few hours after her husband vanished.

Now Waterbury is shaken by a sensation the like of it has never known before, for George Proctor has asked the State police to help him find his wife. He says that she left there with the clergyman.

The police departments in New York and every New England city have been asked to join in the search.

Proctor heard that Rev. Mr. Dane was living in a Mills hotel in New York and his wife had a room in a boarding house so as to throw pursuers of the track.

"My wife is hypnotized," Proctor told the police. "That man wove a spell about her. I warned her.

"Dane is a scoundrel and a disgrace to the ministry. He should be unfrocked. He never called on me at my house, but he and the children often called me when I was in the store."

Mrs. Dane left her husband on Saturday. She took her children with her. Then she filed a suit for divorce, giving cruelty as the ground.

Pastor Denies Charges.

Dane has denied every charge made against him. He will appeal, it is said, to the Conference at Stamford. It is said that Mrs. Proctor, who was a most influential church member, will defend the pastor.

Mrs. Proctor was a Miss Hardwell before her marriage. Thirteen years ago Proctor's first wife eloped with a clerk in his store. When Dane became pastor at the Woodbury Church he appointed Mrs. Proctor treasurer. They became very good friends and finally gossip was started.

Last Sunday morning Mr. Dane said from the pulpit:

"One man I have in mind, who had done all in his power to aid others about him, found that at the first opportunity these same friends took the sword and tried to pierce his side. Not content with this, they passed the sword around and each pressed it into his side, and at length passed it to a woman, who drove it into the gaping wound. At to-night's services I shall further explain this cruel situation."

The church was packed in the evening, but the Rev. Mr. Dane did not appear. He left town that afternoon. Before leaving he said to one of his acquaintances:

"Much said about me is untrue. They say I drove my wife from the house on Thursday night and locked the door on her. It is untrue. I have many women friends in my congregation, but my wife, I fear, has been jealous. I have always loved my wife and been kind to the children and to her, although we were not mated and never should have been married."

STAR SHAMES SINGERS WITH BIG FAMILIES

DETROIT, March 31.—"I think it is a shame that opera singers should have large families," exclaimed Mme. Olive Fremstadt.

Mme. Fremstad deplored that any prima donna should seek to be animated at once by mother-love and the love of art and so be blessed not only with a voice, but with several children.

Were Theodore Roosevelt President still Mme. Fremstad could be convicted of lese majeste. For she insists that her art must absorb a great singer's mind, must occupy every moment of her time, so that a child of hers must needs suffer from loneliness and neglect.

"Prime donne cannot give the attention to their work that they must and care for children, too," said Mme. Fremstad. "All my thought is taken up by my work, and if I had a child it would be a poor, lonely, uncared for little creature. That would be unfair to the child.

"Anyway, only contraltos have large families."

Mme. Fremstad has some very positive views on capital punishment for women. She declared a whole day had been spoiled by reading of the execution of Mrs. Farmer at Auburn prison.

NEW YORK, March 31.—"Only contraltos have large families." One of the most famous contraltos, Mme. Schumann-Heink, is at once the mother of eight children and the source of vocal music as delightful as ever charmed human ear. Mme. Schumann-Heink, who has a residence in New Jersey, took out her naturalization papers in Newark last December. She said she wished to be an American citizeness because this is the finest country on earth in which to bring up children, and offers them most opportunities. But besides—her sons being citizens of the United States, Emperor William cannot draft them for his army.

CHELSEA WILL SOON REGAIN ALL IT LOST

Two hundred members of the Chelsea Board of Trade heard what the Board of Control has done and is doing for the city which was swept by fire almost one year ago, "Chelsea and Its Future" being the topic for a smoke talk at Knights of Columbus Hall.

"In one year from this May we shall have overcome the full loss of the fire," declared Chairman William E. McClintock of the Board of Control which by Legislative enactment has been made the governing body of the city since the conflagration.

Thomas I. Grey, the new president of the Board of Trade, who presided at the smoke talk, urged the members to work hard for the organization and to bring in new members.

Chairman McClintock said that since the fire the value of the new buildings was two and a half times what it had been before the conflagration. He said that in five or six years the valuation in Chelsea would be $37,000,000, and that the increase in valuation this year over last will be $3,000,000.

Mr. McClintock said that hte new site for the City Hall had been selected at Broadway and Washington avenue. He declared that unless the people could agree over the site for the new postoffice there was littl prospect of the governmnt's building it soon.

Alton E. Briggs of th Board of Control declared that the board was doing everything it honestly could to make Chelsea a finer and beter city. George H. Dunham and David J. Maloney also made hopeful addresses.

SHAKESPEARE AT WEDDING

LONDON, March 31.—A novel ceremony of marriage has just taken place at Croyden, near London. The bridegroom was Charles Cooper, long associated with the ethical religious movement. He objected to a marriage in a church.

The mother of the bride, who was Miss Gertrude Peters, considered that a civil ceremony before a register would be cold and soulless. So a compromise was arranged, the civil contract being followed by an ethical marriage at the bride's home.

The Harmony Of Home

Does Not Mingle With or Emanate From The Table of Dyspepsia.

In the home, meal time should awaken in all the inhabitants a peculiar harmony of joy which will make for the home the abiding place of interest and happiness.

If one member at the dinner table is out of sorts, his influence is felt and the harmony is lacking. Conversation and mirth are absent. Devouring thoughts assail the diners and silence prevails.

"At The Dyspeptics' Table Ominous Quiet and Gloom Crowds Out Mirth."

All physicians agree that mirth and joy at meal time does much toward digestion. Mirth tingles the whole nervous organism of man, the cells wherein are stored valuable digestive juices, empty their contents under the nerve stimulation and promote the highest degree of digestion.

If gloom and discomfort prevail at table the reverse action obtains and meals become necessities, not anticipated joys.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are little storehouses of digestion which mix with the stomach juices, digest food, retingle the mucous membrane and its nerve centers, give to the blood a great wealth of digestive fluids, promote digestion and stay by the stomach until all its duties are complete.

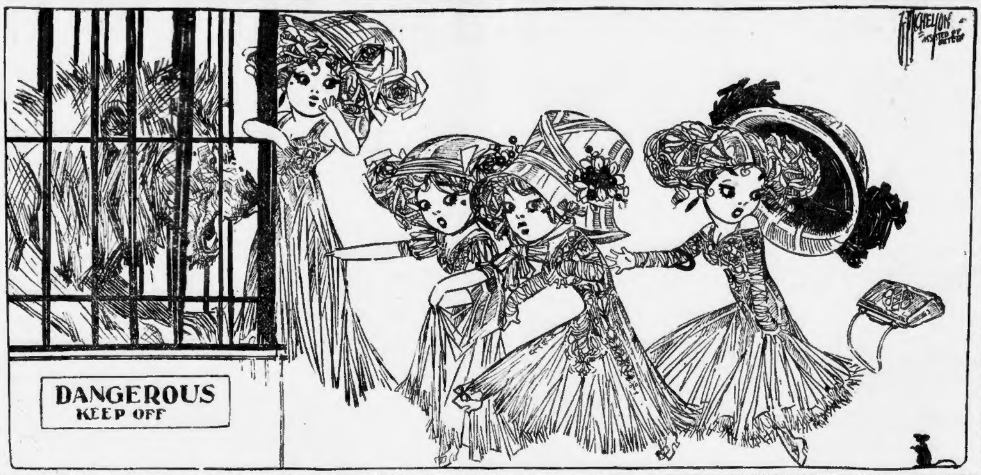
If dyspepsia sits at tables it makes the dining room a place of awe; these tablets should be taken after meals and dyspepsia of a consequence flees.

No need for diet or fasting. The dyspeptics who will use them religiously will find no sense of nausea in the sight of generous meals or in the odor of rich cooking.

It matters not what the condition of the stomach Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets only improve the juices and bring quiet to the whole digestive canal, of which the stomach is the centre.

Forty thousand physicians use these tablets in their practice and every druggist sells them. Price 50c. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

THE LION AND THE MOUSE



POUREN FREED, THANKS HEARST AND AMERICAN

NEW YORK, March 31.—Jan Janoff Pouren is not to be sent back to Russia for an official hanging or a worse fate for the part he took in the Lettish revolution of 1906. Despite the protests of the Czar's high priced lawyers and all the influence of the government of Russia, Pouren was declared a free man yesterday by United States Commissioner Samuel Hitchcock.

The first thing Pouren did after trying to kiss the hand of the commissioner before whom he had been on trial was to thank William Randolph Hearst and the American for the sturdy battle that has been made in his defence.

"But for the American and my other friends, especially the Pouren defence committee, I would now be six feet under ground," he declared at the office of Simon O. Pollock, No. 320 Broadway, one of his attorneys. "I want to thank the American and every one who has contributed to my release.

"My, but it feels good to be free once more. I have been fourteen months and twenty-one days in the Tombs and I thought I was coming to a free country. Now I can really believe that America is free."

The ovation which Pouren received about the law offices was nothing compared to that which awaited him on the East Side. The Yiddish newspapers had extra editions out and all Grand street knew that the revolutionist for whom they had been fighting was free.

GREAT CAREER OF PADEREWSKI MAY BE OVER

NEW YORK, March 31.—The magician of the piano, Ignace Jan Paderewski, may never charm again in America, possibly never again anywhere. He will devote the principal part of life remaining to him to composition if his fears prove true.

The reason for this resolve, the famous pianist virtually admitted, was "piano player's cramp," the insidious, creeping malady that often follows years of brilliant and nerve-wearing execution on the keyboard, blighting the career of an artist before his time.

When Paderewski, who was accompanied by his wife, sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, he held his left hand in the right as if it had been a winged bird that needed the most tender nursing. He seemed aprehensive that his rheumatism might be permanent.

"I may never return to America," said the great Polish artist, somewhat sadly. "I still have pains—shooting pains— in my left arm and hand. I have them now."

He was asked if he apprehended his disability would be permanent.

"Well, we pianists do not know when this thing is to come to us," he said. "It may be that it has come to me. I have got to wait and see.

"At any rate, I shall not probably play for the next two years, or possibly more. My time will be given up principally to composition. I shall write another opera—a short opera.

I have in Europe one or two engagements for concerts which were made for me. Whether I shall fill these engagements or not will depend upon my condition.

SHORTER HOURS BILL WINS IN COMMITTEE

A fifty-four-hour bill for women and minors under eighteen years of age was given a favorable report to-day by the Legislative Committee on Labor. Senator Birch of Milford and Representatives Dorman of Lynn and Butterick of Sterling dissented. The hours of women and minors under eighteen are limited to fifty-eight a week. Under an act passed by the Legislature of 1908 the hours are reduced to fifty-six, beginning January 1, 1910. The bill reported to-day amends last year's act by striking out "fifty-six and inserting "fifty-four."

CALL POLICE IN COLLEGE RIOT

NEW YORK, March 31.—A riot among 350 of the striking pupils at the Manhattan College conducted by the Christian Brothers to-day led to the calling out of the police reserves. Yelling defiance to their tutors, the boys raised a tumult on the campus and in the streets about the college.

The pupils went on strike last night because of the dismissal of John P. Nugent, a pupil from Troy, prominent as an athlete. The pupils have circulated a petition asking the reinstatement of Nugent, and declare that not one of them will attend a class until it is granted.

They spent the night on the campus, warming themselves about bonfires built with planks torn from the fence and defying their tutors.

The fight is directed against the president of the college, Brother Peter, who was formerly head of a preparatory school at Providence, R. I.

LODGE SHOWS HAND TO-DAY

Although Candidates Langtry and Stevens are campaigning like beavers among members of the State Legislature, the real scene of activities to-day in the State Treasurership contest is in Washington.

Senator Lodge is getting ready to show his hand in the contest. The wires are hot to-day flashing messages between Senator Lodge in Washington and his lieutenants in the Legislature is expected within twenty-four hours.

When the tip comes, Representative William F. Garcelon and the other machine men on Beacon Hill will drop their noncommittal attitude and declare for either A. P. Langtry of Springfield, Senator Elmer A. Stevens of Somerville or the "dark horse" whom Lodge is said to be preparing to spring in the race. Senator Crane's lieutenants in the Legislature are with Langtry to a man.

SOCIAL NEWS OF INTEREST THROUGH CITY

Jamaica Plain Council, K. of C., will hold its fourteenth annual banquet at its new quarters, Parkman Hall, on April 14. James J. Nolan is chairman of the committee. Following the dedication of the building last night a class of twenty-five candidates was given the first degree. Grand Knight John Gordon presided, assisted by Deputy Grand Knight Thomas F. J. Curley. An entertainment followed the installing ceremonies.

Vermont maple syrup, with big doughnuts (like mother used to make), pickles, and all the Green Mountain trimmings will be in evidence at the annual "sugaring off" of the Vermont Association of Boston in Paul Revere Hall, Mechanics building, to-morrow night. There will be music and dancing, with the old-time favorites, "money musk" and Virginia reel, included in the order of dances. Charles H. Bradley is chairman of the committee.

There was a large and appreciative audience at the first concert given by the Women's Municipal League in the hall of the Franklin Union. The Lekeu Quartet provided the music, assisted by George Copeland, pianist. Mr. Cabot played two movements of a sonata for piano and cello by Rubenstein with Mr. Copeland, the other number being the opus 51 of Dvorak. The other players were Frederick Mahn, first violin; Alfred Gietzen, viola, and Frank Currier, second violin.

Joseph Webb Lodge, A. F. and A. M., observed "Williams Night" at the Revere House, the principal guests and speakers being Grand Master Dana J. Flanders and Grand Secretary Thomas W. Davis. Worshipful Master Oscar Storer was master of ceremonies, and the entertainment consisted of a stereopticon lecture on a "Trip Through Greece," by Right Worshipful Harvey N. Shepard, and a talk, illustrated by motion pictures, on hunting and fishing, by Dr. Heber Bisrop. There was singing by the lodge quartet, and Dr. G. R. Clark sang several solos. About 180 members were present.

ADOPT HISGEN BILL TO CURB STANDARD OIL

Despite the efforts of the Oil Trust, aided by Representatives Elias B. Bishop of Newton, Charles L. Underhill of Somerville and William E. Dorman of Lynn, to kill it, the Hisgen "anti-discrimination" bill has been adopted by the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

By a vote of 132 to 51 the House has overturned the adverse report of the Joint Judiciary Committee, and substituted the Hisgen bill.

The bill, if passed, will prevent the Standard Oil Company from boosting the price of its commodity in Boston and other places where it enjoys a monopoly in order to cut prices in Springfield and other cities where Thomas L. Hisgen, the father of the bill, and other competitors of the Standard are in business.

Representatives Patrick J. Duane of Waltham, Ernest E. Hobson of Palmer, Thomas P. Riley of Malden, Norman H. White of Brookline and James H. Mellen of Worcester favored the bill in the House debate. They said the bill will protect Boston from having to pay the freight for the Standard Oil Company's battle against Mr. Hisgen and other competitors.

The men who oposed the bill were a bit off on team work. Representative Bishop said the bill was aimed at the Standard Oil Company and therefore shouldn't be passed. Underhill is the man who characterized Mr. Hisgen as "a little man who came to the Legislature crying for aid." Underhill evidently forgot the drubbing he got last year as a result of his speech, for he again accused Mr. Hisgen of being "a small man."

When the votes were counted Mr. Hisgen, the "small man," had 132. John D. Rockefeller, the "big man," had 51.

The bill must pass two more readings in the House. It then goes to the Senate. Twice in previous sessions the upper branch has killed it. The Oil Trust lobby begins work in the Senate to-day.

FOR SUNDAY SALOONS, MINISTER ATTACKED

NEW YORK, March 31.—If the Rev. James M. Farr, pastor of Christ Presbyterian Church and chairman of the temperance committee of the New York Presbytery, is to be censured for advocating the opening of saloons from 1 to 11 p. m. Sunday, the Presbyterian ministers say they are capable of doing their own censuring.

Another denomination, said to be the Baptists, sent to the Presbyterian pastors resolutions attacking Mr. Farr and calling upon the Presbytery to disavow the attitude of its temperance committee chairman. The communication was not received by the Presbyterians. What will happen to Mr. Farr has not been determined. The resolutions characterized Mr. Farr's attitude as an offence against Christianity and temperance.

CUTICURA CURED HIS SORE EYES

When 63 Years Old Eye-Balls and Lids Became Terribly Inflamed—Was Unable to Go About—Home Remedies and Professional Treatment were Equally Unsuccessful.

TOOK FRIEND'S ADVICE: HAS NO MORE TROUBLE

"About two years ago my eyes got in such a condition that I was unable to go about. They were terribly inflamed, both the balls and lids. I tried home remedies without relief. Then I decided to go to our family physician, but he didn't help them. Then I tried two more of our most prominent physicians, but my eyes grew continually worse. At this time a friend of mine advised me to try Cuticura Ointment, and after using it about one week my eyes were considerably improved and in two weeks they were almost well. They have never given me any trouble since. I was then sixty-three years old and am now sixty-five. I shall never fail to speak a word of praise for the Cuticura Remedies when I have an opportunity, and I trust that this letter may be the means of others being cured as I have been. G. B. Halsey, Mouth of Wilson, Grayson Co., Va., Apr. 4, 1908."

MILLIONS FOR IRISH LAND BILL

LONDON, March 31.—Chief Secretary for Ireland Birrell has reintroduced the Irish Land Bill in the House of Commons. The bill is in exactly the same form as when it was crowded out at the end of last session.

In the course of his remarks the Chief Secretary said again that it would require at least an expenditure of $915,000,000 to satisfy the land hunger of the Irish, and of this total Parliament had still to provide $775,000,000.

ELFIE FAY COMING TO BOSTON TO WED

NEW YORK, March 31.—The marrying troubles of Ensign Leslie Barrett Anderson and Elfie Fay, the actress, are not wholly straightened out after all. Ensign Anderson said to-day at Miss Fay's home, No. 529 West One Hundred and Eleventh street, that he wasn't particularly fond of New York's marriage laws anyway, and that he and Miss Fay had decided to be married in Boston.

"No date has been definitely set, but it will be some time next week" he said. "I am going back to my ship and will try to have my furlough extended."

POLICE HUNT MAN WHO ATTACKED GIRL

WORCESTER, March 31.—While returning from a birthday surprise party, Miss Freda Anderson of Rice street, Greendale, was attacked by a man, who dealt her a blow on the head with a blunt weapon, rendering her unconscious. He was frightened off by Frank Brigham, another attendant at the party, who was coming along a short distance behind Miss Anderson. Special officers were detailed to catch the assailant.

NEW BEDFORD WHALERS LOST

NEW BEDFORD, March 31.—The loss of a boat's crew, presumably numbering six men, was reported in a cablegram received by the agents of the whaling brig Sullivan of New London, Ct., which is now at the Island of St. Helena.

The Sullivan sailed from here last June under command of Captain Hagerty for a whaling cruise in the South Atlantic ocean.

The message, which is the first received from the vessel since she sailed, merely reported that the Sullivan had put into St. Helena with 1,700 barrels of oil and had lost a boat's crew. No further details were given and no mention made of any whalebone.

Inasmuch as whaling boats' crews are usually composed of six men, it is believed that 6 of the Sullivan's crew were lost in attempting to fasten to a whale.

CHARTERED TO CARRY SNEEZES TO QUAKERS

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 31.—With one of the most unusual charters in local coastwise history, the three-masted schooner Donna T. Briggs sailed for Philadelphia. The schooner for the next six months will carry snuff between Norfolk and Philadelphia, the charter calling for 200 tons on each trip.

Tobacconists estimated that each pound of snuff is good for 216 sneezes, and that on every trip the Briggs will have between her decks more than 1,000,000,000 sneezes.

Section 1.—If a defect in the ways, works or machinery of a person, partnership or corporation has been reported to the person whose duty it is to remedy said defect, or cause it to be remedied, or to report its existence, and such defect is not remedied within a reasonable time, and by reason of said defect an employe is injured, such employe shall not be held to have assumed the risk of such injury.

POLICE HUNT STOLEN TAXI

The police of Boston and New England cities are searching to-day for taxicab No. 5,124, the property of the Boston Taxicab Company, which was stolen from the front of the Park square garage at 9 o'clock last night.

The only clew they have is the story of a chauffeur of the company who says that while returning last night he saw a taxicab of the company running up Columbus avenue.

Two young men, whom he cannot identify, were on the front seat and from the motions they made it was evident that they were unfamiliar with its management.

The car, a new one, is valued at $3,000. It was in charge of Fred Hoson. He returned to the office last night after a trip, and left the car standing outside the door while he went into the cashier's cage to make a return.

21,000 "SCOUTS" IN SEARCH FOR LAD

NEW YORK, March 31.—Twenty-one thousand scouts of the Sons of Daniel Boone have been asked to hunt for Harold Moon, ten years old, a member of a boys' organization with headquarters in this city. Rewards aggregating $1,8[illegible] await the finding of the lad, who disappeared from his home in Flint, Mich., on February 27, and who, it is believed, has been kidnapped. There are many branches of the "scouts," each being designated as a "fort." Moon belonged to Fort William Taft.

The revolutionists made their headquarters in a house in the centre of St. Petersburg, although the police will not reveal its exact location.

A quantity of firearms was seized, together with much money and a great deal of literature. It is declared that the leaders of the plot were planning a sudden blow which would have fallen shortly. More arrests will be made soon.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 31.—The terms of the treaty of peace between E. H. Harriman and James J. BEAUTY QUESTIONS ANSWERED—Read next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN and learn from Mme. Cavalieri how to be beautiful.

PRIEST SCORES DRINK EVILS

Rev. Father Michael A. O'Kane attacked the treating habit at the third service of the Young Men's Catholic Association retreat being conducted at the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Speaking of the evils caused by drinking and the "treating habit," he said: "That's my hobby, anti-treating." He also told of the great spread of temperance in Ireland, and urged his congregation to give the question careful thought. There were 2,000 young men in the upper church and the lower chapel was also crowded.

Father M. Corbett assisted Father O'Kane, and the services in St. Valentine's Chapel were conducted by Father Francis J. Powers, who spoke for nearly an hour.

At the Cathedral the mission for non-Catholics was largely attended. Rev. E. G. Fitzgerald of the Catholic University at Washington preached the sermon, his theme being "Forgiveness of Sin."

He said in part:

> There is a widespread error which would make confession alone the means whereby Catholics obtain pardon of their transgressions. The Catholic church teaches that the sacrament of penance is the means instituted by Christ for the remission of sin, and that confession is only a part of that sacrament.
>
> The most important part of that sacrament is contrition, or heartfelt sorrow for sin. Without it confession is of no avail.
>
> By contrition Catholics understand all that is meant by repentance. But the Catholic doctrine teaches that an exterior manifestation of heartfelt repentance is also necessary.
>
> Christ gave to his ministers the power to remit sin when he addressed to them the words: "Receive ye the Holy Ghost; whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them, and whose sins you shall retain, they are retained." (St. John, xx., 23.)

FEARED BOMB IN OSCAR'S HAT

Oscar Hammerstein, manager of the Manhattan Opera Company, was refused permission to view the interior of the new opera house by a conscientious watchman, who feared he might have a bomb concealed under his tall hat.

"I wished to go in," said Mr. Hammerstein, "but the man would not let me. He could not have liked my looks. So I just stood around on the street and admired the outside. I thought it looked rather impressive—what I could see of it."

The watchman admitted that there might have been a tall-hatted man seeking entrance.

"But I don't remember him," he said. "I've been keeping 'em out right along. The tall hats don't make no impression on me. If a guy with a topper came around here he didn't get in, that's all."

Send in Your World Race Nominations, Boys and Girls!

GREAT TREAT PREPARED FOR THOSE WHO QUALIFY!

RUSH IS ON; GET IN NOW; RIGHT TIME

sending in both their application blanks and fifteen nomination blanks, properly signed.

Get busy, now, boys and girls! Qualify! Send in your nominations, so that you will be eligible as a guest of the BOSTON AMERICAN at this, the first one of the great treats prepared for you.

Want Boston to Win.

Interest in the race is on the increase, and a visit to the Around-the-World Department of the BOSTON AMERICAN would prove of tremendous educational value to the students of the different phases of child life. A remarkable feature cropping out and noticed among the hundreds of schoolboys and schoolgirls, who daily call at the Around-the-World Department, is the civic pride displayed by the children.

There is a tremendous confidence that no matter who the boys from Boston may be to go in the globe-encircling race, they will bring the championship to Boston. The boys are deeply interested in the progress of the enterprise now being conducted in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles, from which four cities teams of four boys each will be sent in competition with Boston around the circle to beat the record of sixty and one-half days now held by Charles C. Fitzmorris of Chicago.

The desire that Boston shall win seems to be even a more dominant point with a large number of applicants rather than individual victory, though the boys eligible for this race, one and all, express the sincerest personal desire to see the wondrous sights that will be offered the fortunate winners.

Girls Deeply Interested.

The schoolgirls of Metropolitan Boston are not one whit behind the schoolboys in manifesting their deep interest in the tours to Europe and twenty-five other prizes offered them free of all expense by the BOSTON AMERICAN.

It falls to the lot of comparatively few girls to make a trip such as the BOSTON AMERICAN intends to give the lucky winners in this grand offer. The trip around the European capitols will be a leisurely one intended to afford each of the winners ample opportunity to view all the sights and study the wonders.

The triangular trips for both schoolboys and schoolgirls who are lucky enough to win one of the major prizes, are well worth trying for. New York, Washington, Niagara Falls and return to Boston, all in the finest Pullman cars that the railroads afford, attended by competent guides, and the program throughout.

Never Out of Boston.

The various trips offered are, indeed, veritable treats. Of the thousands of letters which pour into the BOSTON AMERICAN office from applicants and nominees, a vast majority of the writers declare that they have never been out of Boston and its suburbs. To these, the trips, such as are planned, will prove a revelation and cannot help but be of tremendous educational value and aid in their development.

None Too Poor.

Any schoolboy or schoolgirl of fourteen years of age or over, can win. None is too poor. The chance is such as comes to few in a lifetime, particularly when the trips are to be made without a cent of expenditure while en route in any manner, shape or form.

These trips and race will be vacation tours practically, and will afford an exceptionally fine opportunity to spend the time away from school, both pleasantly and profitably.

Numerous of the letters received declare that the applicants have been discouraged in their efforts to win by their friends and relatives. But why should they be discouraged? Not one of the steps developed so far have demanded anything but what the poorest of the applicants could do just as well as his or her more wealthy opponents. First, the application was requested and then nominations by fifteen different adults, men or women, and the other steps which are to follow will not be any harder than the preceding.

Equal Chance for All.

Every boy and girl has an equal chance for the prizes. But hurry along your nominations. The applications received so far, far outnumber the complete nominations received at the office of the AMERICAN. There is absolutely no reason for this, except, possibly, a desire on the part of some to hold back and see what others are doing.

The only way to qualify for the great moving picture travelogue, now being arranged is to have your nominations listed. Get busy!

Letters have been received by the BOSTON AMERICAN from a number of teachers and others interested in educational work, declaring that up to date the Race Around the World and Tours through Europe enterprise as announced, has had a tremendously good effect upon the schoolboys and schoolgirls of Metropolitan Boston. Both boys and girls are devoting themselves to diligent study of geography, history and foreign nations, through which the various tours will go. This cannot help but prove of great benefit all around.

Write Names Plainly.

A number of letters have been received by the BOSTON AMERICAN with one cent stamps attached. Special attention of the applicants and nominees for the various tours offered, is called to the fact that two cents stamps are neded in every case where the letter is sealed. Do not hesitate to write to the Around-the-World Editor at any time on any point which is not clear to you or when you fail to understand any of the steps developed.

In addressing the Around-the-World Editor, applicants and nominees must write their names and adresses as plainly as possible. The addresses should be written at the bottom of the letter and in forwarding photographs great care must be taken to write the name and address plainly on the back of the photograph. This must be adhered to in every case to avoid mistakes, because of the enormous number of photographs which are reaching the BOSTON AMERICAN office.

Madam, They Don't Digest

Your home-baked beans, however you like them, are certainly hard to digest. Much of their nutriment simply ferments and forms gas.

It is not merely a question of like and dislike—this question of home-baked beans.

It is true that some people like home methods best. They are used to them.

No matter if the beans are mushy and broken—crisped on the top and half baked in the middle.

We all ate beans that way in grandmother's day. And some people cling to old ways.

But there is one unavoidable fact which makes home baking utterly wrong.

Home-baked beans are very hard to digest. They are heavy. Part of the beans simply ferment and form gas. That is evident to all who eat them.

The reason is, your dry oven heat.

You can't apply enough dry heat to separate the particles so the digestive juices can get to them.

Your top beans become crisped, but the beans farther down rarely are heated above 100 degrees.

That is due solely to your lack of facilities. It is nothing that you can correct.

Beans, to be digestible, must be baked in live steam, superheated to 245 degrees.

We bake in that heat without crisping a bean—without bursting a skin—because we use steam.

We bake in small parcels, so that every bean gets the full heat of our ovens.

Thus we make beans a digestible dish. They don't ferment and form gas. You get the whole of their nourishment.

Most people like to eat beans that are nutty, mealy and whole. Our beans are that way.

Most people like the tomato sauce baked in, as we do it, for it gives a delicious blend.

Such tastes may differ, however.

But all people want their food to digest. And beans can't digest unless baked in our way.

That's why Van Camp's are essential.

Van Camp's BAKED WITH TOMATO SAUCE
PORK AND BEANS

You should welcome the fact that home-baked beans are not so good as ours. For see the time and work you save by having beans ready to serve

This dish is too good to spoil.

Beans are 23% nitrogenous—84% nutriment. They are Nature's choicest food.

In beans you get the food value of meat, and at one-third the cost. So it pays to serve the beans that your people like.

We pay $2.25 per bushel to secure the best beans grown. Some beans cost but 30 cents. We spend five times as much to make our tomato sauce as other sauce costs ready-made.

So it is very important, when you order beans, to be sure that you get Van Camp's.

Three Sizes: 10, 15 and 20 cents per can.

Entitled "How to Become a Mechano-Therapist. It tells how every man and woman, with even an ordinary, common school education, can acquire a profession within a few months which will insure financial independence for life. WHAT IS MECHANO-THERAPY?

Mechano-Therapy is the art, or science, of treating disease without Drugs. It is similar to Osteopathy, but far superior, being the latest up-to-date method of treating disease by the Natural Method. It heals as Nature heals—in accordance with Nature's laws.

The Mechano-Therapist is a drugless physician and a bloodless surgeon. His medicines are not drugs, but scientific combinations of food, circumstance, idea, water and motion. His instruments are not knives and saws, but his own deft hands and the vital processes of the body itself, the circulation, respiration, secretion, etc., which he manipulates. The Mechano-Therapist is skilled in compelling the body TO DO ITS OWN HEALING with its own forces, rather than with poisonous drugs of the old school practitioner.

The Advertising Manager of the Appeal to Reason, Girard, Kan., says:

"I personally know the gentlemen composing the faculty of the American College of Mechano-Therapy, and am familiar with their methods. The College is chartered by the State of Illinois and is the oldest and largest institution of its kind in the United States."

E. C. HOWE,
Advertising Manager of Appeal to Reason.

CAN I LEARN IT?

Have you asked yourself this question? We answer, unhesitatingly, YES.

If you have so much as an ordinary common school education, you can learn.

If you have the ambition to better your condition—to earn more money—to have more leisure—you can learn.

Nor does it require years of patient study to learn Mechano-Therapy—we can teach you in a very short time, so that you may begin practicing—and when you begin to practice, you begin to make money. No text books are required, beyond those furnished by us. We supply all lesons and necessary text books free of cost to you. No apparatus is used. You do not even need a place to work. All you require is your two hands.

Any person—man or woman—with just an ordinary common school education, can learn Mechano-Therapy. There is nothing vague or mysterious about it. It is easy to learn and easy to practice.

It is simply the latest, most improved method of drugless healing. Just a common sense method of treating human ills without dosing the system with poisonous drugs—that's all. We have taken hundreds of men and women who were formerly clerks—farmers—stenographers—telegraph operators—insurance agents — railway employes — in fact, nearly every known occupation—old men of sixty years who felt discouraged and hopeless—young men of 20 years, who had never had a day's business experience—salaried men, who could see nothing in the future but to become Oslerized—Laboring men, who never realized that they had within themselves the ability to better their conditions.

We have taken these men, and women, too, and pointed out the way to a higher, more useful life, elevated their conditions and put them in a position to earn more money—MUCH MORE MONEY—than they could earn in any other way

Reader, isn't our proposition worth investigation? Isn't it worth the time and trouble to send us the coupon? Isn't your future health, happiness and prosperity worth a two-cent stamp? For your own sake—and for your family's sake—write for our FREE book, which explains all.

Don't put the matter off until to-morrow—or next week—or next month—write right now; this minute.

Our College the Best

Dear Doctor—I received your letter of commendation and my diploma last Saturday, all in first-class order. I feel highly pleased with the fine and beautiful execution of the diploma. You have my heartfelt appreciation for the valuable knowledge I have gained from your course of scientific Mechano-Therapy. I consider your instruction, charts and manual the most complete course for obtaining a proper knowledge of human Anatomy and Physiology, which is indispensable to becoming a successful Mechano-Therapist. I can indorse and recommend your college as the best that exists for the attainment of a useful and beneficial profession.

NICHOLAS AEBISCHER.

Cost One-Thirtieth of Osteopathy

Dear Doctor—As one of your graduates, I can scarcely find words to express my satisfaction with the profession of Mechano-Therapy. The course as you teach it at your college is so simple, so easily understood, the lessons only require such a small portion of one's spare time, that I am not surprised you have such a flourishing institution.

It only took me six months to get my diploma in Mechano-Therapy, and the entire cost was only about one-thirtieth of the Osteopathy course. In the profession of Mechano-Therapy I have never found the slightest difficulty in getting all the work that I cared to do. It is hard for me to understand why any man or woman will spend two to five years in the study of law, dentistry, osteopathy, or, in fact, almost any profession, when they can learn Mechano-Therapy in six months without leaving their own homes. Yours gratefully,

H. JERMUNSON.

Best Paying Profession

Dear Doctor—The good you have done me through your instructions has been far beyond my expectations. I bless the day that I enrolled as one of your students. Mechano-Therapy is one of the cleanest, best paying, up-to-date professions I know of, and if any young or middle-aged man or woman is looking for a profession that will never die, why not choose one that is up to date in every respect. One that is remunerative from the start. One that is practical in every way. One that is not built on theory. One that is progressive. One that is fascinating. One that will make you prosperous while you are making others happy. One where you will be appreciated for what you are worth. I can heartily recommend Mechano-Therapy to all who want a fine profession.

DR. F. T. SLAGLE, D. M. T.

A Graduate Makes Wonderful Cures

Dear Doctor—After graduating from your college I felt it my duty to write you and thank you for your encouragement and help. Your lessons as I received them were most practical and up to the standard. You have them arranged in such a way as to make the student more and more enthusiastic as he progresses in the line of work. I feel that I am now in possession of knowledge by which I will be of great help to suffering humanity, and I assure you I will do all I can to recommend your college, and its practical methods of doing business. I thank you from the bottom of my heart for placing me in a position, not alone socially, but where I can look upon suffering mankind and say there is relief and cure, as I have already made some wonderful cures through your method of Mechano-Therapy. Thanking you again, I am, yours fraternally.

DR. C. H. PERSON, M. T.

"Income $15.00 Per Day, Formerly a Blacksmith"

Dear Doctor—It is a pleasure to me to heartily indorse your college, and especially to those who contemplate a course in drugless healing. The possibilities of the Mechano-Therapists are almost unlimited. The man who induced me to take a course in Mechano Therapy was formerly a blacksmith, with only an ordinary education. To-day he is practicing drugless healing, with an average income of $15.00 per day. With my best wishes to the American College of Mechano-Therapy, I am, sincerely yours,

W. S. McCLURE.

Prominent Optician Endorses Mechano-Therapy

Dear Doctor—I have taken your course and feel very well satisfied, and I cannot say too much in praise of your college.

I have practised optics for the past ten years, and feel that I have lost half of that time without Mechano-Therapy. Optics goes in fine with this profession as a side line.

Should you have any correspondents in doubt as to the value and advantages of your course, simply refer them to me and I will be pleased to give them my past experience in Mechano-Therapy.

Yours very truly, DR. A. J. MILLARD.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, March 31.—Activity in the stock market is not caused by any news developments, but rather by gradual growth of an optimistic feeling. Just as the feeling of panic gradually grew and swelled into a tumult, so the optimistic feeling is now beginning to make itself felt. Many Wall street bankers believe the situation in Washington has a great deal to do with this matter. They insist that assurances have been received that the tariff will be revised in a way entirely satisfactory to the corporations.

$ $ $

The advance in Steel is impressive because of the small net earnings expected for March, some estimates placing them as low as $5,000,000. The small net is owing largely to the fact that prices had to be reduced on orders placed before the public cut. The advance is undoubtedly caused by short covering, the short interest in the stock having grown to unwieldly proportions. One important short is said to have covered privately after the market closed.

Part of the strength of Steel is undoubtedly owing to the possibility of ore being placed on the free list by Congress. The great deposit of Bessemer ore in Minnesota extends across the border into Canada—in fact lies closer to Lake Superior in Canada than in the United States. Should the tariff be removed the Steel Trust would take only a minimum from its American mines, thus throwing thousands of men out of work in the United States and employing as many thousand in Canada.

The enormous deposits of ore in Nova Scotia, if developed at all, would find a market at Atlantic ports within easy reach of Steel Corporation plants in Pennsylvania. Steel Trust officials are wondering how long the American people would enjoy the spectacle of Canadian ore lands being developed at the expense of those of the United States. This explains their hilarity when tariff reform is mentioned.

$ $ $

Erie is reporting a large increase of net earnings for March. This is unfortunate, because the company may be able to pay its own coupons, and by paying them deprive itself of additional security for further bond issues. Those Wall Street operators who really understand high finance think that what Erie needs is a management that will continue to lose money and thereby provide additional collateral for bonds each month. Old-fashioned financiers feel that payment of Erie coupons out of the earnings of the company deprives the road of improvements that are imperative. With $20,000,000 expended on the property Erie would become one of the best of the trunk lines. Erie campaigners are now talking 40 for the stock.

$ $ $

Professional traders say that the list has a tired look, and although they believe it will continue to advance they favored a reaction. The fact that the most important short in Steel was permitted to cover privately removes one good reason for a further advance just now. The short interest in other directions has been eliminated, for the upheaval has been too rapid to tempt short selling the last few days. The only reason for expecting a material advance in the market is that the market nearly always does move higher in April. The necessities of the railroads are such that they must have a strong market on which to sell their bonds.

$ $ $

The renewed activity on the Stock Exchange does not appear to have awakened any fresh demand in the time money market as yet. Probably because the amount of call funds procurable is amply sufficient to meet all present demands notwithstanding the retrenching that, under ordinary circumstances, would be observed by the banks to meet the heavy quarterly disbursements on the first of next month.

$ $ $

Judging from reports of operations by the leading copper producers, output of the metal for March will break all records. Consumption is growing and speculators seem to be buying copper metal more freely, with the result that the unsold surplus in the hands of original producers is not expected to show as large an increase this month as it did last.

$ $ $

Local traction interests have pronounced views on the copper situation, and concisely stated these may prove worthy of attention. They indicate an outlook for the metal by no means as dark as appears to be expected in the trade. According to the traction view, the development of trolley enterprises promises in the next few days a greater growth in the copper business than any other source of demand. It is contended that this kind of development has been arrested for years, but that now it appears to be on the point of starting again with a greater degree of impulse than it ever possessed before. The years of tight money conditions practically cut off all new construction of trolley lines, not here alone but the world over.

$ $ $

Brooklyn Rapid Transit has made a high record, crossing 76 on what seemed to be genuine buying for traders. The business of the company is very large this Spring, and there is confidence that the lines will be permitted to charge 10 cents to Coney Island without further molestation by the courts.

$ $ $

After a period of more than a month, during which the genuine investment buying of high grade bonds has been at low ebb, the average price of twenty-five representative railroad issues is found to have declined only about 5 from the January average, reached at the end of a period characterized by a very satisfactory demand. So far as the month of March itself, is concerned prices have remained practically unchanged, the present average being 93.76, as compared with 93,805 at the beginning of the month. This stability of market position is the feature which is being mentioned as a particularly gratifying one.

STOCKS REACH NEW TOP PRICE

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, March 31.—New high records were established again in Wall Street in the early trading to-day. Southern Pacific sold at the highest price in its history when it touched 123⅝, a net gain of ⅞ of a point. Atchison made a new high record for this year at 106⅝, and Reading at 136⅜. Union Pacific made a new top for this year at 184½.

Other stocks showing strength and advances were St. Paul, New York Central, Erie, the Hill shares and the Steel issues. In the group of specialties Con Gas advanced nearly a point to 138⅞. Missouri Kansas & Texas rose one point, and so did National Lead, American Cotton Oil, Kansas City Southern and Allis Chalmers were other specialties to exhibit strength.

Copper shares were heavy during the early part of the session and Amalgamated declined ½ a point. Later the copper shares improved. Tractions displayed heaviness shortly after the opening, Third Avenue selling down nearly a point to 125¼, while Interborough Metropolitan issues were fractionally lower.

All these shares regained their losses when the general list began to move upward. In London American shares were strong under leadership of the Harriman shares and Erie. On the New York Curb market Nevada Consolidated and Cumberland were the strong stocks of the copper group. In the silver list Nipissing was a fraction lower, while Larose sold at its previous high record prices. Goldfield Consolidated was steady and sold ex-dividend.

"Leave to withdraw" is the report of the Legislative Committee on Education on the bill providing persons for all school teachers in the Commonwealth who have taught for thirty years, twenty of which have been in public schools and ten in the city or town where they retire.

Eight-Hour Law Ruling.

Public employees who are found working over eight hours a day will be considered to have been "requested or required" to do such work under a bill favorably reported by the Legislative Committee on Labor and printed in the House calendar to-day. Representatives Dorman of Lynn and Butterick of Lancaster dissent from the committee's favorable report.

In a report printed in the House calendar to-day, the Legislative Committee on Taxation recommend a "Next General Court" reference on the bill to distribute the franchise taxes of business and other corporations to the cities and towns where they do business instead of to those in which the stock holders live.

Oppose District Option.

The Legislative Committee on Liquor Law, with five dissenters, has reported adversely on the bill to allow Boston to vote by districts on the license question. Senator Harvey of Waltham and Representatives Cutting of Weston, Barnes of Waltham, Wanet of Somerville and Hogan of Cambridge dissent.

LOCAL STOCKS DULL BUT FIRM

STATE STREET—Boston did not present as firm an appearance in the stock market prices as New York in early dealings, yet there was the same disposition to buy non-taxable securities. They were strong and somewhat scarce. In this list Boston & Maine was firm at 142 and New Haven & Hartford advanced 1 to 161. Old Colony stiffened ½ to 199½. West End sold at 97 and the preferred at 109.

Local Mining Shares.

Although dull, mining stocks were generally firm in tone. North Butte was irregular and the street cannot determine whether the manipulation represents liquidation or accumulation of the stock. The price variation this forenoon was between 70½ and 71¼. Mass Mining stiffened to 6⅜, with Gay the buyer. Amalgamated was quiet at 74@74½ and Arcadian moved up to 5¼. Calumet & Hecla was firm at 630. Hamlin sold Boston & Corbin off to 20. Sharp buying in Parrot put the price up to 33⅝.

Other Features to List.

American Telephone was quoted ex-dividend $2, but was firm at 130⅝@130⅞. East Boston came in for attention, and on buying by Henshaw rose from an opening at 9 to 9½. New England Telephone rights sold at 2⅝. Pneumatic preferred stiffened to 20¼, and Shoe Machinery went off ¾ to 54½. United States Steel was firm at from 48 to 48½.

Affairs on the Curb.

The local curb presented a steady tone after the big selling which ensued in the final half-hour yesterday. Bay State Gas was steady, as were the other active stocks. It is believed that yesterday's selling represented the closing out of a loan account, but the stability of the curb market was shown in the manner in which the large offerings were taken without impairing prices to any extent.

Business Men Outline Plan to Make "BOSTON FINEST CITY BY 1915"

Work Begun To-day, Headquarters Opened, and the Real Movement Begins With Courage to Carry It Through.

A DETERMINED movement, backed by a committee of the most aggressive and progressive business men of Boston, to make Boston by 1915 the "Finest City in the World," started actively to-day when permanent headquarters were opened at No. 20 Beacon street.

The plan contemplates the betterment of the city from a business, intellectual and moral standpoint. It is so made in its scope that it is figured that it cannot reach its fruition before 1915. Hence it is known already as "The 1915 Movement."

The committee, comprising 228 men, met at the City Club last night and shaped the plan into definite form and made arrangements to begin the work at once. Edward A. Filene presided at the meeting. An executive committee was formed to carry out the work, consisting of Mr. Filene, James J. Storrow, James L. Richards, Louis D. Brandeis, Bernard J. Rothwell and George S. Smith.

Three of the men prominent in Boston "model city plans."

The meeting was one of the most enthusiastic ever held in this city. Every man in attendance was of the same mind as to the necessity and feasibility of the proposed work. The spirit of real, permanent progress permeated the meeting.

Many of the men who attended the meeting upon invitation had no idea what was in contemplation. When Mr. Filene gave a summary of the work that had been done and which had culminated in the plan proposed there was a spontaneous outburst of applause.

Mr. Smith then read on outline of the plan. He called it "A Plan for a Boston Plan." Then came interesting and illuminating addresses.

Richard C. Cabot, one of Boston's most noted physicians, told of the great work already under way in the city to better protect the health of citizens.

What the Merchants' Association has done for the business uplift of the city was told in an entertaining and instructive talk by James J. Storrow, the president of the association.

How Boston may be made beautiful was the theme discussed by J. Randolph Coolidge, a widely known architect. Henry B. Sawyer told how the boys should be cared for so that they would make men that would be a credit to the city. Henry V. Cunningham and George W. Coleman also addressed the meeting.

After the meeting was over the men were so interested that they remained about the club discussing the magnificent project. To-day the movement is on with an enthusiasm that has rarely been seen in any similar work in Boston.

COMPLETE REPORT ON BOSTON PLAN

Here is the complete plan, as presented, to make Boston the finest city.

The Boston plan is a proposition to give a continuing interest in the life and growth of Boston, and so to secure the help of all the people of the city in making the plan complete and in carrying it out.

Many individuals and organizations in Boston are already at work in this direction. It is not necessary, therefore, to create much new machinery. The idea simply is to bring about a mutual understanding and co-operation among the agencies in existence, to the end that they may unite their forces in support of a common programme and so prevent the waste of time, money and men.

Such a programme should make clear to all citizens what it is possible to do toward making Boston more and more a community of homes as well as a more prosperous centre of commerce and industry.

With the advice and assistance of experts, and the help of every man and woman interested in Boston's future, the orderly development of the city would follow, and would include the best things that have been done anywhere in the world in city building. Until now Boston, like other cities, has developed largely of itself, and if no city plan were made it would undoubtedly continue to grow in the future as it has in the past, all topsy-turvy. But buildings, ships, railroads and most great private and public works are planned deliberately and in great detail.

Such plans made known in advance, to all the citizens and enlisting their support are found by experience to be an inspiration and a guide to private enterprise and united effort. They serve to arouse a spirit of loyalty to the city and an ambition on the part of the individual to be helpful in its undertakings. One reason why the people of our cities are not as interested as they should be in them is that they have so little knowledge of what the city is doing and what it can do. Once they have an intelligent knowledge of what it is doing as a whole it becomes impossible to waste its resources; it is honorable and attractive to serve it.

Will Rouse Civic Pride.

Boston has a rare chance to organize for this definite purpose all its elements of public spirit and goodwill. The people of the city—all the people can be brought together to agree on a policy for its advancement, the like of which has never been seen in the history of the world. It is therefore proposed to make a declaration of the general ends toward which the city is to strive and a specific statement of the steps little and big by which year by year people shall realize a definite part of their hopes at a given time—say, 1915.

But if such a programme is to appeal to and enlist the service of all sorts of men it must take considerate account of the interests of all. Not only politics, but business; not only commerce, but labor; not only work, but health and pleasure, art, music and painting must be provided for. It must depend upon that sense that all men have somewhere in their makeup that the good of the whole is greater than the good of any man, group, class or interest in Boston; and that finally there can be no conflict between the interests of a good citizen and a good city.

The Boston plan, therefore, must be comprehensive, simple, clearly practicable, but as broad as it is long. It is proposed to make a systematic effort to find out and ultimately to do here, every good thing that has been done in any city in the world, and also some good things that elsewhere have been as yet left undone.

It is proposed, therefore: First, by 1910, to have an expert accounting of the financial condition and resources of the city, present and prospective, and so clearly stated, explained and illustrated, that the man in the streets may understand. Moreover, the fact should be made plain that, whether he owns property or not, he contributes to these resources and pays a tax in every purchase he makes, and in every comfort he provides for those dependent upon him.

Second, by 1910, to understand clearly the waste and other losses in the public finances and service; to complete all reports thus far made; and to publish the findings fairly and impartially.

Must Lead the World.

Third, by 1915, to have the best public health department that can be planned on the basis of all experience; the best system of sanitation for the prevention of wasteful and unnecessary disease and accidents; the most scientific and efficient treatment of the stricken and physically deficient; the most intelligent protection of child life; the best system of insuring the purity of the food and water supply; in short, the most complete organization possible for guarding the public health.

Fourth, by 1910, to have made a careful accounting of the human resources of the city, to make it clear that Boston can rank first in the skill and character of its workers and in organizing and executive abilities of its industrial leaders.

Fifth, by 1910, to secure a broad-minded consideration by and with its employers and employes of their relations; happier and better conditions here for both the workers themselves and their wives and children than anywhere else in the world to the end that by 1915 all Boston shall be busy in peace and prosperity and leading in the solution of this great human problem.

Sixth, by 1910, to have under way an organized movement for the extension of existing industries and the introduction of new enterprises.

Seventh, by 1911, to gather for the people of Boston and for the neighbors accurate information concerning the particular capacities of the cities, towns and country districts of New England and to assist sympathetically in the development of them; to consult with men having special knowledge as to their agricultural and other natural resources; to learn and to appreciate what is now being done with and for them and to help to point out and encourage all men and women to see what may be, but it is not being done.

Eighth, by 1915, to have in successful operation a system of public education so planned as actually to fit the boys and girls of Boston for their life-work and to develop not only their minds but their strength, skill and character, and to give them an intelligent interest in life and in their city, in the broadest sense. This system should provide also for adults through evening and part-time schools and well planned industrial training. But it should include an organized sytem of playgrounds, baths, clubhouses and social centres for both old and young.

Calls for Lecture Series.

Ninth, by 1915, to have well along toward completion the execution of an intelligent system of transportation fof the city, State—and New England as a whole—steam and electric, express, freight and passenger. This plan should be the result of public deliberations between the transportation interests, and the public, represented by men who best understand Boston's needs in transportation; advised by experts familiar with the latest improvements at home and abroad; these deliberations to be guided by the assumption that the true interests of the transportation companies and of the public are identical.

Tenth, by 1912, to draw out of all the plans which have at various times been drawn for Boston, and out of the best experience of European cities, one city plan which shall show how Boston will look physically when finished. The city as it is shall be the basis of this plan; and the city as it is growing naturally shall be the guiding lines of the proposed design for the future.

Eleventh, by 1910, to have established a system of small neighborhood and district centres where lectures will be given illustrated with lantern slides and other pictures and maps; where city officials may meet the people and where the candidates of any party and others who have suggestions to make, or help to ask, may find the people. And as a part of the plan it is proposed to establish (probably at first by private enterprise):

Twelfth, by 1910, regular courses of lectures on civil government, politics, city planning, play, health and business, together with various entertainments. A central lecture bureau, too, will be established so that the guests of private societies may remain in Boston not for the one night only, but long enough to tell his message to the people of Boston to that they shall be kept as intelligently informed of what other cities are doing as they are of the progress of the Boston plan.

More Music in Parks.

Thirteenth, to increase the number of regular branches of the Public Library and to establish here the system that has succeeded elsewhere, of circulating through shops, factories, schools and clubs.

Fourteenth, that the Public Library and art museum shall circulate pictures and the reproduction of pictures, as is done in France; and as a part of this service, provide lecturers who shall follow the pictures around and point out not only the beauty and esthetic and historic significance of them, but the skill of the artist in the use of line and color.

Fifteenth, by 1912, to have more music in the parks and in the neighborhood centres. In order, however, that the people shall feel that these centres are their own, they should be equipped with gymnasiums, baths and a society hall or halls where the people may organize their own clubs and provide for their own entertainment.

SPEECH MADE BY MR. EDWARD A. FILENE

Mr. Filene spoke as follows:

I think it would be difficult to gather together a like number of men in this or any other one city in this country who would represent so much work for the common good, and that is why your hosts have asked you here. We want to consult with you. We believe that the growth and welfare of our city can be immeasurably helped by co-ordination and by planning ahead. We believe that Boston has within it the powers and possibilities that can make it the finest city in the world.

Boston has always had those powers and those possibilities, but we have not been able to use them because of the lack of foresight. And this is no charge to be laid against our city alone. Cities the world over have in the past grown unguided. But a change has come in the world. Cities are being planned now. And why not?

Needs Far-Sighted Planning.

No man is so foolish as to undertake the construction of a great building without an architect, but the building of a city is the greatest of all buildings and should have the best and most far-sighted planning. We can predict here what we might accomplish with such a design our predictions are almost certainties, for our plans can, and they should be, based upon what other cities have actually accomplished by wise forethought. And neither are our losses, due to the lack of such planning, based on guesses, for, unfortunately, they are only too apparent to the naked eye that looks candidly at our city. No far-sighted city planning in the past, for instance, would have allowed the main artery of our city to cramp the flow of traffic as Washington street does and must continue to do; for the opportunity to remedy this condition is lost, probably, forever.

But we need not dwell upon the irrevocable. What is more important at present is that our city shall not allow the opportunities of to-day to be lost. Take only one instance; we are allowing new slum conditions, a repetition of the old conditions of over-crowded housing to be re-created even in the outskirts of our city, at the very time we are taxing our energies and resources in the attempt to stamp out tuberculosis and other diseases which result from such conditions. We must tackle this problem, and we can find the way. For it has been done. Other cities, notably in Europe, have made city plans that have made over-crowded houses impossible, and this with not only a just conservation, but to the advantage of property rights. And if we don't do this, we and our children, and our children's children, will be using up a great part of our strength and resources and time to remedy our waste, preventable waste; waste not only of money, but also of the vitality and the usefulness of the lives of boys and girls, and of men and women.

How great this waste is, how great the unused powers and possibilities of our city are, will be indicated in the "Plan for a Plan for Boston" to be presented to you to-night, and in the necessarily brief statements of the other speakers. We feel confident that as a result of this evening's conference you will feel that the time has come for looking ahead and planning for the future of our city, planning adequately for opportunity for a fuller life and a happier life for all of our citizens. There is nothing visionary in what we have in mind. In the main it consists in bringing to Boston in addition to what we already have here, a knowledge of all the best things that have been done by any city in the world in any way, and in combining all these best things in a plan for Boston.

Now we are not going to ask you to do many new things. Neither are we preparing any political party to do them. On the contrary, there is machinery enough in Boston to start well and willing men and women enough to start with. What we do propose is to divide the work among the many organizations and the men and women, and even the boys and girls who may care to help, so that all may have their share, and none shall have an impossible burden. The Chamber of Commerce, the Boston Merchants' Association, all the citizens' associations, all the social and philanthropic and business and trade and labor organizations, all the schools and churches and theatres and libraries shall have their part and each shall have the help of all the others when needed.

New Energy and Power.

If this seems too big an undertaking, requiring more energy and power than our city has, it will not seem so when we remember that the energy and power we are now using to repair the waste due to the lack of such planning is sufficient in itself to carry out such a plan, not to speak of the new energy and power that can be created thereby. And, after all, it means largely that we propose that it shall be possible for a willing worker earning an average wage to live, himself and his family, healthfully and comfortably; to bring up his children in good surroundings; to educate them so that they may be truly useful, good citizens, and to lay aside enough to provide for himself and his wife in their old age. A city which provides less than that directly, must make up for the deficiency in a more costly, indirect way; there is no escaping this alternative.

In a word, then, we believe that Boston has the possibilities for becoming the finest city in the world; we believe that by wise planning the whole city can be set to work to accomplish a reasonable part of this plan every year and finally make an exposition of all that has been done at a not too distant time, say 1915. Suppose, for instance, that some one of us should say: "This or that has been done better elsewhere, and this and that can be done here in Boston."

RIOT FOLLOWS HUNCHAGIST'S DEATH THREAT

It was declared to-day in Brighton that the cause of the Armenian riot at the mass meeting there last night was the assertion of one of the speakers that he had killed a rich rug merchant in New York and suggested how the thing could be done in Boston.

Then the knife and pistol fighting began.

As a result Karchian Essian is in the City Hospital to-day with a bullet wound that may prove fatal and four participants were held in the Brighton Police Court to-day.

The police are trying to locate Moses Shenian, who disappeared as soon as the fighting began. Shenian, according to one of the Armenians who appeared in the Brighton court to-day, has been trying for some time to strengthen the Hunchagist society with recruits from the Brighton and Watertown neighborhood. He was chased out of Watertown and got up last night's meeting in a restaurant in Brighton.

Held in $10,000.

It was charged that the fight started because some one charged that certain funds had been misappropriated. To-day it is claimed that the Armenians to the number of about sixty who attended the meeting resented the suggestion that they go after Boston merchants in the same manner as Shenian said he had treated the New York rug merchant.

The prisoners who were arraigned in court to-day were covered with lint bandages. Monoogder Hoohenessian was charged with shooting with intent to kill Karchian Essian and held for a further hearing on April 5 in $10,000 bail. Karchian Dagazarian was held in the same bail on the same charge.

John Palonian and Oskion Oskinian were each held in $1,000 for assaulting each other. Eight men were held in $200 bail as witnesses.

Patrolman Woodman was ringing in his box when an Armenian in his shirt sleeves and bare-headed ran by crying "Murder! Police, come quick!"

Just then several pistol shots rang out. Woodman ran to the boarding house at No. 387 Western avenue, where he saw a knot of men rushing in, another man in their arms. This was Karchian Essian, twenty, single, of No. 2 Quimby street, East Watertown, who had a bullet hole through his back.

Then other shots crashed out behind him and Woodman ran to the restaurant in time to cage a score or so of the rioters.

As he ran, the officer pulled out his revolver, and with levelled weapon, stopped the men escaping from the doorway.

Someone lighted the gas jets. Seven men were lying on the floor among and beneath overturned tables, chairs and broken dishes. In the little back room, the kitchen of the establishment, several more or less disheveled and slightly bruised and scratched men were getting their breath.

The patrol and ambulance made more than a dozen trips before all the wounded, the witnesses and persons held on charges, had been taken to hospital and station house.

M'FARLAND GETS DRAW WITH DAVE DESHLER, THEN FLOORS REFEREE

Packy McFarland, the Chicago lightweight, lost his temper at the end of his twelve-round bout with Dave Deshler of Cambridge at the Armory A. A. because Referee Sheehan called it a draw, and floored the arbitrator with a right hand wallop to the jaw. There was a mix-up for a few seconds till some cool heads jumped into the ring and restored order.

It was the first time that such an unsportsmanlike act had ever been committed in the club's arena and the members were highly incensed over McFarland's move. Packey apologized through his manager, Harry Gilmore, from the ring, saying he was sorry for losing control of himself as he thought Sheehan was a fair referee, but added that he considered he had received unjust treatment when he failed to get the decision.

The sensational aftermatch stirred the fans up and Packy had some harsh criticism hurled at him as he sat in his corner, showing plainly that he felt keenly the position he had placed himself in the eyes of the crowd.

Packy Denied Victory.

While there was a big difference of opinion on the result the majority present considered that McFarland deserved the award, as he showed up as the best fighting machine and was bristling with action from thes tart, always carrying the gaff to Deshler, who was plainly in the ring to outbox him if it was possible. He fought cautiously at all times. His clever blocking and fast footwork carried him away from Packy's dangerous punches and his exhibition of boxing skill was something to marvel at. But even Deshler's superior tactics and lightning action could not stop the fiery Packy from getting to him in the final rounds, when the test of the battle was on.

Driven desperately by Deshler's sparring methods Packy bored in, forcing Deshler to the ropes continually, and the local boy did not escape without some hard pounding on his framework.

Packy Gets His Stride.

It took Packy some time to size up such a lively stepper at Deshler, who was out to boost his reputation by outpointing the classiest game he had yet faced in the ring. It was no easy task to reach Deshler, who was skipping about every square inch of the ring and Packy wasted many of his punches trying to connect till he got going in imitation of Battling Nelson, and then Deshler was up against it.

Packy all aflame because of his vain efforts to put Deshler in line with his fists got desperate and waded in without giving heed to where Deshler hit him, and his overpowering strength and fierce attack brought him in front at short notice.

A boxer less skilled in the ring craft than Deshler would have had more trouble in weathering the storm, for Packy was in furious mood and went in so savagely he lost control of his delivery, hitting Deshler low and putting himself in danger of disqualification.

Deshler Started Well.

When Deshler began to pop his left into Packy's face getting away without a return and rushed in beating him to his punch, the Cambridge lad's admirers began to chirp with prospects of a downfall for the undefeated lightweight, but Packy got into his stride in the second round and showed his hand by slamming some rights across that were full of steam. The cut in the eye Packy received in the third round caused Deshler's stock to soar again as he continued to show too much cleverness.

It was not till the seventh that Packy's gameness and fighting powers began to stand out prominently and from then on he took matters into his own hands and Deshler's cleverness proved of no avail against the tigerish ferocity of Packy.

Some good talent appeared in the prelims, with hard picking for a winner. Tom Foley beat Jim Reardon in six rounds, but Max Baker was so evenly matched with Kid Dyson of Providence that an even break was a satisfactory verdict. Tommy Rawson and Young Nixon went six rounds at a close clip, neither getting the decision.

Round One.

They shook hands, but were careful to leave no opening. Dave was the first to start the fireworks by going in with left to body. Again he stepped in, landing left to head. Mac took a turn and planted a left on the body. Dave got busy, slashing in with right and left, while Packey covered up. Dave got confident and worked his left to the head and then to the body, making Packey miss a right swing. Dave hooked left to body and got out of the way of a wide right swing. Packey tried to sneak a right over in the break and was hissed. Deshler's round.

Round Two.

Packey led left but Dave brushed it aside with his arm. A right swing just grazed Dave's jaw, and Dave feinted Packey into a clinch. It made Packey mad, and he drove Dave into a corner, but couldn't land. Deshler swung right for jaw, but he was too close. Packey was backed into a corner, slamming right to body. Packey slipped down and Dave went to him the instant he was back on his feet. Packey hooked with a right to the body and Dave easily ducked a heavy right swing. Just before the bell Dave had Packey backing to the ropes. McFarland's round.

Round Three.

Deshler scored with left to the face. Packey stepped in and shot right over short. Dave got even by pushing a series of lefts to the face, while Packey clung to his right. Dave jabbed, making Packey go wild with right swing. Both got home with left hooks to the body and a right to the head caused Deshler to tie up. McFarland rushed but missed with right. Dave's head hitting him above the eye and blood trickled down Packey's face. Deshler slipped on a wet spot and Packey let him have his right, and was roundly hissed. Deshler chopped with right to head. Deshler's round.

Round Four.

Deshler started to force matters. He snapped his left on the face and jabbed. Packey aimed for the body and hooked hard with left. Deshler backed into a corner, but Packey could not land. He uppercut Dave, but hit on the arms. Dave jabbed hard and they mixed. Packey being the first to clinch. Packey swung right but landed on Deshler's back. In a hot mixup Dave got in solidly to the body with both fists. Dave stabbed with left and Packey's right went harmlessly by his face. Deshler's round.

Round Five.

Both began to use their lefts and had a jabbing duel with little choice. Dave tried to connect with right to jaw as Packey rushed, but had better luck with a left to the wind. Packey tried to measure Deshler for a right to the jaw but could not get him firmly located. Both boys slowed up in their boxing, waiting for their second wind. Even round.

Round Six.

Deshler feinted and Packey clinched. Deshler drove right to body as Packey went in. Dave rushed and put right to body again. He got over a facer with his right, but Packey scored with a left hook to head. In order to escape Packey, Dave slipped along the ropes with Packey after him. He let go a wide uppercut which Deshler easily pulled away from. Packey chased, swinging right and left for body, with Dave trying to block. Dave jabbed, sending Packey backward as he swung right. Deshler's round.

Round Seven.

Dave started away jabbing with left to face. He jolted with right and left in the clinch. Packey, frantic, backed Dave to the ropes and landed with left to head. He had Dave on the barrier again and banged right on the jaw, and it looked bad for Deshler. After slamming right and left to body, Deshler sought a corner with Packey on top of him. Packey sailed in again with right and left flying, Deshler not caring to pick him off, but looking to his own safety. McFarland's round.

Round Eight.

They bumped together in the centre of the ring, hooking lefts to body. Packey rushed into the ropes as Dave sidestepped. In again went Packey, shooting right for jaw, and Deshler came back with a shower of rights and lefts. Packey, with head lowered, drove in swinging right for jaw. He missed a right as Deshler backed up. He was not disconcerted, but tore in again, reaching the body with a right. He kept after Dave, falling short with a right, but ploughed in once more, smashing with both hands on the body. McFarland's round.

Round Nine.

Deshler landed a nice left to the wind. Packey was intent on landing his right, but couldn't gauge his opponent. He did put over a left rib-roaster, but Deshler came back with both hands, counting on the head. Dave caught Packey coming with a straight left, but it failed to stop him any. He was back mixing at the bell. McFarland's round.

Round Ten.

They exchanged lefts to the head. Packey swung right, landing on the arms. He tried again, hitting Dave flush on the jaw, and he clinched. Packey just missed a second swing, but got Dave in a corner, where he piled on some short hooks to the body. Dave got inside of another right swing, and Packey nearly ran into a right uppercut as he rushed again. While Dave was close to the ropes Packey swung a right uppercut which ruffled Deshler's body. McFarland's round.

Round Eleven.

Round Twelve.

Deshler went into a clinch as Packey rushed. A right to the jaw surprised McFarland, but did not stop him any. He rushed with head lowered, breaking down Deshler's guard, and uppercut with right to the head. Deshler swung right for jaw as Packey bulled in and took a right to wind. Packey took a jab [illegible] the nose, getting close to Dave, forcing him [illegible] and fighting as long as his hands were free. [illegible]land's round.

FRED EAMES MAY TAKE ON CUTLER MATCH

It is the championship billiard tournament in New York that is keeping the local green cloth fans interested this week. Lem Curtis of the Imperial took the train yesterday to be on hand with his friends already in the big city in seeing A. G. Cutler hitch up with Morningstar in their game. Betting had been heavy on the Boston representative, though Morningstar had made a great showing in the tournament.

Cutler's admirers counted it was time for his long run of hard luck to come to an end. It did seem that the hoodoo bird was on his trail when it so happened that he was stacked against Slosson and the latter was in form to average 62, and a couple of games later he could only average 12 with Harry Cline.

Then there was the match in which Sutton made an average of 33 against Cutler. With other players all that Sutton was capable of was 14. Certainly, this has been hard breaking for Cutler. Sometimes, when discouraged, Cutler has been heard to remark that he must have seven years of tough luck; then—it will be still tougher. But billiards has always been noted for its ups and downs.

By the way, Mr. Curtis is going to bring back with him Tom Gallagher for a session at the Imperial. He goes with George Carter in a five-nights play at different games of billiards.

Visitors to New York have sent home the news that one of the spectators at the billiard tournament is Fred Eames, champion of New England, who in recent years has been located in Denver for his health. It is said that he intends coming to Boston before returning West, and it may be possible that he will meet Cutler in a match game at the Hub Billiard Palace.

Local billiardists feel that it is unfortunate the New Boston has been closed through misguided management. Affairs of the kind tend to harm other billiard rooms in the city, too. There is a chance, so it is said, that the New Boston will be opened again in the near future under different ownership.

Up at the Hub the cue artists are remarking over the wonderful improvement G. F. Parker has recently made in his game. At playing off the red ball and 18.1 balkline he is now a hard customer to beat, whereas in former days "Gip" was a cakewalk for the clever boys.

In the Class C tournament at the Hub, Goodwin and Thurston are tied for first place, while all along the line the contest is bitter for position, except in the case of Smith, who has yet to capture a game. To-night Smith meets Frank, and the former believes he has a chance. Score:

	Won.	Lost.
Goodwin	3	0
Thurston	3	0
Hill	2	1
Tuttle	2	1
Carlton	1	1
Klucken	1	2
Frank	1	2
Malo	1	2
Thompson	1	2
Lewis	1	2
Smith	0	3

WOLGAST BESTS PICATO.

LOS ANGELES, March 31.—Ad Wolgast of Milwaukee won from Frank Picato of Los Angeles in the tenth round. The fight was fast and furious all the way, but Wolgast was never in danger.

John L. Sullivan's Column

What a difference between the boxing of to-day and years ago, when the game was run on a different basis.

To-day it is the commercial end which interests the fighter first and foremost, while in my day it was a matter of superiority to establish. Then it was a case of winner take all, and the loser was up against it. Nowadays the fighters insist on a good loser's end, and the nearer the men appear to be matched the more even the money is split.

You don't hear of any of the fighters to-day backing himself for $1,000, an item which was as important as the purse itself in former times. To approach a fighter now with such a proposition would be to insult his rating and the bet would be looked upon as a joke.

Yet when I fought Corbett the purse was $25,000 and $10,000 side bet. I never received a guarantee in my life, knowing before I went into the ring just what I was to receive for my end, and it makes a difference the way a man fights when he knows beforehand just how much is coming to him after the fight. It's some incentive for a man to fight for a big purse and his own pile which he has to back up his own idea of his prowess. When the loser knows that there is nothing in sight for him after the battle he is likely to fight for his life.

It took the old method of battling under the London prize ring rules with bare knuckles in the ring on the turf to make a champion the same as when I fought Jake Kilrain, Charley Mitchell, Jim Flood and others.

It was that way of fighting which brought out strength, science and skill and not the present day code of rules, where a man may get a decision at the end of twenty rounds, neither man being hurt because they have sparred all the way.

Such a reward is not worthy of making a man a champion. There is no demonstration of physical courage demanded as under the old London definition.

When I was champion I gave everybody a chance to show what he could do against me and made an offer of $1,000 if they could stay four rounds, not asking for a deposit. If they managed to stay the limit they got a bonus, which they deserved.

Nowadays if a strong young man would like a bit of the championship he must approach the title holder with a bundle of money, for he will be told to go get a reputation. What a surprise it would be to have a champion announce that he was willing to meet all comers and if they could last a number of rounds would be handed a suitable reward. That's too much like work and might prove disasterous to some of the champions running into a snag in a youngster who was a good one, and they take no chances. It's the same old game; if you're at the top you can dictate and set up the rules for the other fellows to follow.

I have just as great an interest in the sport to-day as I ever had, and no one would like to see the public get a better run for its money than I do.

Answers to Letters.

John L. Sullivan:

Dear Sir—Please tell me the nationality of Harry Lord of the Boston Americans? Did Jimmy Walsh ever hold the bantamweight championship?

A. B. M.

He is an American, born in Maine. Walsh never held the championship.

John L. Sullivan:

Dear Sir—Please tell me who was heavyweight champion in 1862?

J. B. McC.

East Boston.

Tom King won the championship, then handed it to Jem Mace.

LON M'DONALD, NOTED TROTTING DRIVER, DIES

EAST AURORA, N. Y., March 31.—William B. ("Lon") McDonald, the famous Grand Circuit driver, died at his home here, following an attack of paralysis. He was a veteran of many years' standing on the turf and was exceptionally well known to New England followers of light harness racing for his abilities as a driver, his winnings at Readville placing him in a class by himself.

Last August, when driving Allen Winter, he captured the biggest race of his career, the $50,000 trotting Derby at the Readville track. In 1904 and 1907 he performed the great feats of getting first money in the Norfolk stake race, driving Morning Star the first time and Kruger the second time.

As a trainer of young colts McDonald had more than average success. In 1903 he won the great Kentucky Futurity, worth $20,000, with Sadie Mack, the horse that in 1905 came down the big line, winning the big stakes, until she struck Hartford. Here she dropped dead in the Charter Oak Stake.

In 1905, when the thirty-third annual Kentucky was held, McDonald had Miss Adbel for his entry. She was a dark horse, but won, stepping one of the miles in 2:09¾.

TRAINER NEYLAND GOES TO READVILLE

Trainer Dennis Neyland, who was colt-breaker at Forbes Farm for years, and had charge of Bingen (2:06¼) and other noted trotters, has decided to locate at Readville within a short time. He will devote his attention to breaking and educating a number of promising young trotters that have been placed in his charge.

FERGUSON WILL POST FORFEIT FOR BIG FIGHTS

Manager Hugh McLean does not intend to let Kaufmann evade meeting Sandy Ferguson if the Californian means to stick in the fighting game. He says:

I will bet $500 that Kaufmann does not stay 20 rounds with Ferguson or will fight him winner take all anywhere on the face of the globe. It's ridiculous for Kaufmann to be fighting Ketchell or Johnson and the followers of the fighting game know it with out me mentioning it.

Ketchell is not to be counted among the heavyweights for the championship. Ferguson and Kaufmann are the only two white heavies who can be considered at the present time.

Ferguson will fight Johnson without waiting for Kaufmann. He has fought Johnson five times and is the only fighter who has the credit of a knockout on the colored fighter.

I will post $1000 any time to bind a match with Johnson and as soon as the match is arranged will cover the $5000 forfeit which Johnson has put up. And it can go as a side bet if Johnson desires.

TOM SHARKEY TO GO AFTER JOHNSON

Tom Sharkey will fight Jack Johnson. He saw Packy McFarland and Dave Deshler box at the Armory A. A. and was introduced in the ring, and when called on for a speech rather startled his listeners.

"I am not an old-timer," said the sailor. "And I want to say right here that if Jeffries doesn't say that he will fight Johnson pretty soon that I will challenge Johnson myself. I am young yet. I am only thirty-five years old, strong as a lion and eat like a bull. All I want is three months' training and will be in shape to fight Johnson.

"I haven't announced my intentions through the press, as I was waiting for Jeffries to make a move, but he better hurry up."

LANGFORD'S MANAGER TO TALK TO JOHNSON

NEW YORK, March 31.—Jack Johnson has consented to meet Joe Woodman, manager of Sam Langford, to-day, to talk over the details for their proposed fifteen-round bout at the National Sporting Club of London on May 24. When Johnson was informed that Langford was looking for him he seemed surprised, but sent word to Woodman that he would meet him at the Hotel Albany at noon to-day to have a talk about the match.

YOUNG CORBETT AND KEYES RE-MATCHED

NEW YORK, March 31.—So good was the last battle between Bert Keyes and Young Corbett that the boys have been rematched and will meet again in the near future. Jimmy Kelly, Keyes's manager, thinks so well of his boy that he will bet the bankroll that this time he knocks Corbett out.

BROTHER PHIL WINS.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Phillie McGovern decisively beat Joe Coster in their ten-round bout at the Bedford Club last night, having the better of the argument from start to finish. McGovern, who was seconded by brother Terry, came near ending the bout in the fifth round, in which session he tore after Coster like an infuriated bull, whipping home rights to the head and body and sending Coster to the mat in a dazed condition.

STARTER WALKER HOME.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Starter Frank B. Walker, who has been in Jacksonville, Fla., for nearly four months, returned to his home here a few days ago as brown as a berry and in the best of health, having gained more than twenty pounds since his departure from the metropolis.

Boxing News in Brief Form

Johnny Dwyer of Perth Amboy, N. J., has called off his match with Frankie Madden at the Sharkey Athletic Club for Wednesday night on account of an injury to one of his arms, and Manager Buckley has secured Phil Brock of Cleveland to take Dwyer's place. Brock is one of the best boys of his weight in the country, and has taken part in a number of long-distance fights on the coast.

* * *

Promoter Coffroth has his eagle eye on a Billy Papke-Hugo Kelly match. The San Francisco official has made Papke an offer to meet Kelly at Colma on May 1, holding out the inducement that the winner will be given an early date with Stanley Ketchell for the middleweight championship. "My right arm is still in bad shape, and I want to give it a good rest before I fight again," said Papke. "I would like another chance against Flynn. I would know how to fight him to win if I got him in the ring again."

* * *

Jem Driscoll, the champion featherweight of England and Australia, will not return to America until next September, it is said. He is filling an eight weeks' theatrical engagement in Great Britain and intends to spend the summer months resting.

* * *

Jack Twin Sullivan has posted $500 to box Ketchell and is willing to forfeit his end of the purse if he doesn't put up a good battle.

* * *

Willus Britt has made up his mind to gather some easy dough around here with his champion, and will probably start with Joe Albino in a six-round bout at Pittsburg. Britt is waiting for a reply from Clark Bell regarding a guarantee.

* * *

Jack O'Brien has gone back to Philadelphia where he will rest up a few weeks before going to work again. Jack thinks his showing Friday night entitles him to further consideration, and he will likely be signed up with one of the big fellows. Jack says Ketch has a peach of a left jab and is the first boxer who ever blackened both his eyes.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

DOVES PLAY LAST GAME AT AUGUSTA

By BILL ROSS.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 31.—The Doves are ready to [illegible] the Augusta team this afternoon [illegible] Castro's [illegible] tossers [illegible] they were [illegible] in the [illegible] that they never [illegible] from start to finish. To-day is their last opportunity to go up against the Boston Nationals this season.

The Doves did not have their regular outfield at work in the second game and had Bill Dahlen was also out of the battle. He has a stiff ankle and [illegible] very much averse to wasting his energy [illegible] bush leaguers was asked to be excused. He has not decided whether or not he will report this afternoon and Bowerman is willing to let the veteran lay off if he wants to. Peaches Graham is a shortstop as well as a catcher and would rather play ball than eat.

The Boston pitchers this afternoon will be Gus Dorner the Flying Dutchman, and Kirb White, the silent wonder. Big Mike expects to be the receiving partner of the battery, unless Dahlen asks leave to play. If Dahlen does Peaches will be the Boston catcher and Bowerman may play centre field or let Lindaman shine there. Fred Beck will be first sacker once more. The Augusta twirlers will be George Pierce and Big Hartley. Barrett did very well for Augusta in his first trial in the box.

More Errors Than Hits.

Both teams made seven hits and the Castro team loaded the error column until it totalled nine. The fielding of the Doves was not above reproach. Bill Sweeney booted a ball that Peaches Graham could have eaten alive if the third sacker had let it alone, while Johnny Bates's performance in the field would not have escaped adverse comment [illegible] Zorger [illegible]. He misjudged [illegible] another [illegible] Beck [illegible] dropped one ball that Sweeney [illegible] across the diamond to him.

The Augusta team got away from the post with a heavy list to port, and observing that they could [illegible] the Boston boys loafed all the time they were in the field. While they were at the bat they showed plenty enough that Big Mike's training has borne fruit. Whether they hit the ball or not they made runs. They were up and doing all the time on the bases. There have been better Yannigan games than the one which was played here yesterday. If the Bantams had been up against Augusta and had played with the spirit they showed against the regulars it's one good bet that Count Castro's team would have gone [illegible] with a heavy coat of whitewash. The Doves were first at the bat, and Barrett walked Bates, who stole second like a fire chief's wagon responding to a third alarm. Becker popped up a fly to Hohn, who failed to clutch it as a Rockefeller would a rebate. In fact he muffed it. He slammed the sphere to Billy McMahon to shut off Bates at third and the Lowell boy not only dropped the ball, but let it get by. Bates scored.

Augusta Men Score.

Augusta opened up at the bat with an earned run. McLauren bunted for a base and Cad Coles sent him home with a belt for two sacks. Bates started the third inning with a safe hit, but there might have been a double play if Castro had not muffed Bierman's throw after the latter had filled Becker's hit.

Bates tried for the plate and was first man down when Beck made a scratch hit, but Becker got to third and scored on Ritchey's grounder to Castro.

In the fourth Sweeney walked and White, who hit to Bierman, got to first and then to second, when Hohnhorst let the ball get by. Lindaman sent a drive to McMahon and the third sacker made a star stop and caught Sweeney at the plate, but Lindy got to first and White to third. Lindy stole second and scored after a fly by Bates had enabled White to get home on Barrett's muff of Becker's pop fly. Graham singled in the fifth, going to second when Bowerman went down, Bierman to Hohnhorst, scoring on Sweeney's single.

In this round Augusta also got two runs. Carson hit the longest drive of the game, but was too slow to get further than second. He scored on McLauren's hit and the latter reached second when Bierman went out and got to the plate when Coles hit for a base to centrefield.

Graham Draws a Pass.

Graham got a pass in the seventh inning and reached third when Bowerman lined the ball out for a base. When Big Mike started to steal second Carson thought he could get him, but the Boston manager made the sack in safety and Peaches reached the plate.

In the last session Becker singled and ran the bases some to get third on Beck's safe wallop. All Ritchey wanted to do was to send the Kansas boy home and he did it with a long fly to McLauren.

One of the incidents of the [illegible] was the way [illegible] like [illegible] a ball off [illegible] going like a [illegible] and got his walk by a lightning throw.

Tom Tuckey pitched the last third of the game for the Doves and the Augustans only got him for one base. The Boston Bantam team beat the Columbia team at Columbia, S. C., yesterday by the score of 8 to 1. The two teams play there again to-day.

THONEY MAY PLAY IN FIRST REGULAR GAME

By BERT MITCHELL.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 31.—This is [illegible] last real practice [illegible] of the trip for [illegible] Red Sox. After [illegible] that all ball players dread. It will be [illegible] and simple after to-day. [illegible] the [illegible] under the guidance of Manager Lake will line up against the Nashville team for a battle. Next day there will be another game, [illegible] then the [illegible] ton, [illegible] and [illegible] of the American League season.

[illegible]

A Southern trip with less incident [illegible] than the present one has never taken place so far as the writer can remember. The players simply got down to work and put themselves in condition in quick order. There were no contests for place. Danzig had no chance to displace Jake Stahl at first base unless Jake fell down badly. But Jake didn't do anything of the kind. He started off in whirlwind fashion and has kept it up all the way.

We have a little fellow named French down here. French has proved himself a grand little ball player. He seems to be as good as McConnell as a fielder, perhaps a little better. But up to date there has been no opportunity for him to demonstrate that he is a better batsman than Little Mac or that he is a better man on the bases. Fred [illegible] he will play shortstop in place of Charlie Wagner, who had to go home on account of the illness of his wife.

French Is a Star.

French handles all the grounders that come his way and bats for about [illegible] Manager Lake [illegible] it does not seem likely. At all events [illegible] utility infielder in French, and the club will surely keep him on the payrolls to fill [illegible] French is a little star in his way and I commend him to the attention of the Boston fans.

Niles, also booked as a utility infielder when we left for the South, has had to play in left field on account of the slow recovery of Bullet Jack Thoney. Niles is a valuable man, and no one realizes this fact more than Lake. He can play the outfield as well as the infield, and as a batter he is a good one. It will be remembered that he [illegible] American League [illegible] fielder and then as the regular left fielder on the first team.

The news to-day however, is that he may be displaced before the season opens. Manager Lake thinks that Thoney will be in shape to be in left garden by the time the flag battle begins in Philadelphia on April 12.

Thoney Is Better.

In these dispatches yesterday the writer [illegible] a little talk with Thoney, [illegible] the Bullet said [illegible] hurt him all over. Well, Thoney went out this morning for another workout and after [illegible] told his manager that he believed he would come around all right.

"I have been discouraged, Fred, but I really think after my practice to-day that I am mending rapidly. I feel better this morning than I have during the trip, and if everything keeps on as it did to-day I will be there for the opening game."

This bit of information from the Bullet pleased the manager not a little. I send it just as reported to me. But I must say I am a bit doubtful if the Bullet gets there in time, although I hope he does.

When the Boston club landed Thoney from Toronto last Summer it looked as though they had [illegible] star of the first water. At that time he was leading the Eastern League in batting and base running and about every other department of the game. He was throwing as well as any outfielder in the big leagues. But when he reported to the club at Little Rock last Spring his arm was gone.

While he made good on the Red Sox last year in batting, base running and covering ground in the outfield, his wing was so poor that he had to relay every ball to Wagner. It is safe to say that at least half a dozen games were lost on the Huntington avenue grounds last season simply because Thoney couldn't throw.

This year his arm is 100 per cent. better and Jack anticipates no trouble with it if he can [illegible] strength. This is the only trouble. He said this morning that he was more encouraged than he had been since the trip [illegible] really felt that he could [illegible] there for the opening game. Let us hope so, for with Thoney on the team Lake will have an outfield that would [illegible] anything [illegible] for swiftness.

Cubs Play Again.

The Cubs played another exhibition game with the Nashville team yesterday and again won, [illegible]. Again the world's champions showed themselves to be poor batters, [illegible] four hits off the Nashville twirlers.

[illegible] Englard League pitcher, was in the box for Nashville the last four innings and [illegible] the champs. [illegible] old friend Pat Moran did the work behind the bat for the Cubs.

B. C. PREP TEAM TO PLAY SATURDAY

The Boston College High School baseball nine will open its season next Saturday when it clashes with Boston English High School at the Massachusetts avenue grounds.

The squad that has been out for the team has been cut down to about twenty. [illegible] B. Maher of Rockland, [illegible] "Pep," who has been [illegible] team, has done some [illegible]

The team that will line up against English High Saturday will be picked from the following men: Kane '09, [illegible] '10, Reardo '10, [illegible] '09, [illegible] case, [illegible] '09, [illegible] base; "Captain" Jack Sweeney '09, shortstop; O'Keefe '09, Lanbier '10, Goodlag '09, Moore '10, Garrity '11, Reilly '11, Heath [illegible] fielders.

Through his unfamiliarity with the roads Arthur See, the man who took the Max well on its first trip to Newburyport yesterday, got lost in the wilds of north eastern Massachusetts, and after floundering around in the mud and ruts finally reached Newburyport through what might be termed the back door. Instead of following the well-known and beaten path through Lynn, Salem, Beverly and along [illegible] Rowley and Ipswich, See made the [illegible] straight along over the Newburyport turnpike, a road which few cars follow the entire length, even during the best of the riding season. This course is [illegible] of the [illegible], and has often been compared to a switchback. It was a cruel thing to say, but she could no more have helped it than she could have helped her breathing.

Langford was pale and haggard. He, too, had suffered. He was paying for his sins. He was expiating them and feeling it, although the expiation was not helping her.

"What of him?" she asked insistently.

"What matters about him?" he said bitterly. "He had his chance. He failed to grasp it. He's gone."

The man did not tell her that Charnock had been carried away a senseless log, bereft of power to think or speak, or [illegible] by the [illegible] of her [illegible]

"Since," said the woman, "you had your chance in the cabin of that very yacht out yonder and you failed to grasp it, and we separated."

"Yes," said the man, "I know that. I realize that now, and I came back. I have come back now to take my chance [illegible]"

Sank Lower Than He.

"And so he may come back," said the woman. "You sank lower than he."

"And I rose higher the other day upon the sand."

"You did, but not high enough. I believe in him. He will realize it, too," she went on, all the confidence of her hopes springing into life again and giving force and power to her voice and bearing. "But I came back, not he."

"You were your own master," said the woman swiftly. "You could go where you pleased. He was subject to the decision of others. I trust him still."

"It [illegible] There must be some [illegible] I did not know [illegible] realize it. I came back the first [illegible] as much because I had been [illegible] you, but every hour of [illegible] know [illegible] seen you [illegible] nothing I would not do for you, [illegible] I would not suffer for you."

"How terrible are the arrangements of [illegible] said the woman. "I [illegible] believe what you say. You awaken my pity, my tenderness, my consideration, but these are [illegible] I will say for you [illegible] the truth, that [illegible] just as you do and more a thousand times. I love that man."

"But he doesn't love you."

"Oh, [illegible] Not as I would be loved, I admit, not as, please God, I shall be [illegible] by him. He doesn't know. He doesn't understand. Wisdom will come to him and he will come back."

"It might be so," said the man. "I came back. But he believes you dead."

They had stepped nearer the entrance of the cave, which was a spacious one, as they spoke. The beauty of the woman in that soft light was so intense that it cast over Langford a spell. He heard the sound of her voice, but did not heed what she said. Suddenly he caught her in his arms.

"Kate," he cried, "we are alone here and I am master. That is my ship yonder. I can have you bound hand and foot and take you aboard of her. I will say that you are mad, that I am taking you back to the United States to your friends. You must come back with me. I can't let you go."

"Valentine," said the woman quietly, "if you do not instantly release me, I will kill you where you stand. You don't realize how strong I am. See!"

With a quick, sudden movement she caught his arms with her free hands and literally tore them apart. To her lithe and vigorous body she added spirit and determination which made her indeed more than a match for the slender, somewhat broken man [illegible] before her.

"You see," she cried. She stood between him and the doorway, one hand outstretched, the fingers open. "I could kill you before you left this cave."

"Kill me if you wish," said the man recklessly. "I don't care. Perhaps that would be better. I don't care. Perhaps that would be the better way."

"No," said the woman, "I respect you too much for that."

"Everything," said the man, "but love me."

"Everything but that," assented the woman quietly.

"I will wait here for him."

"Kate," said the man impulsively, [illegible] was ungenerous of me not to give [illegible] you before. This took him away from [illegible] senseless, raving with brain fever. He [illegible] stretched as [illegible] the [illegible] that little [illegible] the [illegible] which bore your message. He thought you dead. He left the ship in the early morning to seek [illegible] The [illegible] was too much for him."

"He loved me, then," said the woman.

"Yes," said Langford, wringing [illegible] miss on from his lips, "he loved you enough almost to die for you."

"[illegible] back," said the woman. "Don't tell any one that I am here. Let no one ever come back unless the [illegible] of his heart and the leading of God [illegible] bring him to me."

"[illegible]"

"My final and [illegible] Note [illegible] your word of honor as a gentleman, by all that you hold sacred, you will never mention to a human soul that you found me here alive."

"On my word, by all that I do hold sacred, by my love for you, Kate, I will not [illegible] leave."

She extended her hand to him. He seized it in his own trembling grasp and kissed it [illegible] He released her hand, stooped lower, laid something at her feet, turned and resolutely marched out into the sunlight.

A Great Purpose.

LATE springtime in old Virginia. The [illegible] hour, scarcely for a moment even was that island out of his mind. There was pleasure and pain in the recollection of it.

Had he been less a man he would have sought oblivion by following the path to death upon which he fancied she had shown the way. When he came to his senses in the cabin of the ship, worn, wasted as one who had gone through the valley and the shadow of death itself and they told him, in answer to his eager questions, the truth which he had divined [illegible] her remembrance.

It had not been difficult to establish his rights. Whittaker and the chaplain, armed with the depositions, had taken the man across the continent when the ship had been put out of commission at San Francisco, and persuaded him to [illegible] a great house on the Nansemond shore overlooked that estuary of the James by Hampton Roads.

The old man, childless and alone, had welcomed him gladly. The newcomer was of the Charnock blood.

It was a strange moment for the islander when they took him into the great drawing room and showed him the pictures of his father and of his mother. He was the living image of the man, tempered with some of the mother's sweetness.

This remarkable likeness—indeed he was not unlike his uncle as well—coupled with the material proofs, the ring, the Bible, the evidence of the ship, together with what was known, removed every lingering doubt from the minds of those most concerned.

The family was reduced to those two— [illegible] his heart. She sat down upon the sand. Her bare feet touched something metallic [illegible]

WHEN I shall meet God's generous dispensers
Of all the riches in the heavenly store,
Those lesser gods who act as recompensers
For loneliness and loss upon this shore,
Methinks abashed, and somewhat hesitating,
My soul its wish and longing will declare,
Lest they reply: "There are no bounties waiting,
We gave on earth your portion and your share."

THEN shall I answer: "Yea, I do remember
The many blessings to my life allowed
My June was always longer than December;
My sun was always mightier than my cloud
My joy was even deeper than my sorrow,
My gain was ever greater than my loss;
My yesterday seemed less than my to-morrow
The crown looked always larger than the cross.

"I HAVE known love in all its radiant splendor,
It shone upon my pathway to the end.
I trod no road that did not bloom with tender
And fragrant blossoms planted by some friend.
And those material things we call successes
In modest measure crowned my earthly lot.
Yet was there one sweet happiness that blesses
The life of woman which to me came not."

The foregoing verses from a poem by Ella Wheeler Wilcox are reproduced, by permission, from the April number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Mrs. Wilcox's friends will find the balance of the poem in the magazine.

Engineering on The Planet Mars

A REVIEWER in the London Times of Professor Percival Lowell's book on "Mars as the Abode of Life" makes a pregnant suggestion. Why, he asks, has not Professor Lowell dealt with the temperature difficulty on Mars as he has with that of the scarcity of water?

And then he goes on to add that if the Martian engineers have constructed the gigantic system of irrigation of which our telescopes give us a hint, they must surely have been capable of solving the no less important problem of storing up solar heat on that chilly, unblanketed planet.

While Mars gets only half as much solar heat as we do, its cloudless condition is favorable to employment of heat engines depending on the utilization of the sun's rays.

In its equatorial regions the sun is never hidden by clouds, and all day long solar engines might run without interruption.

If the canals [illegible] are, as Professor Lowell thinks, irrigated lands, it is equally probable that [illegible] along which [illegible] is conveyed to the neighborhood of the poles, where the annually melting snows are assumed to furnish practically all the water that is available to keep the planet alive.

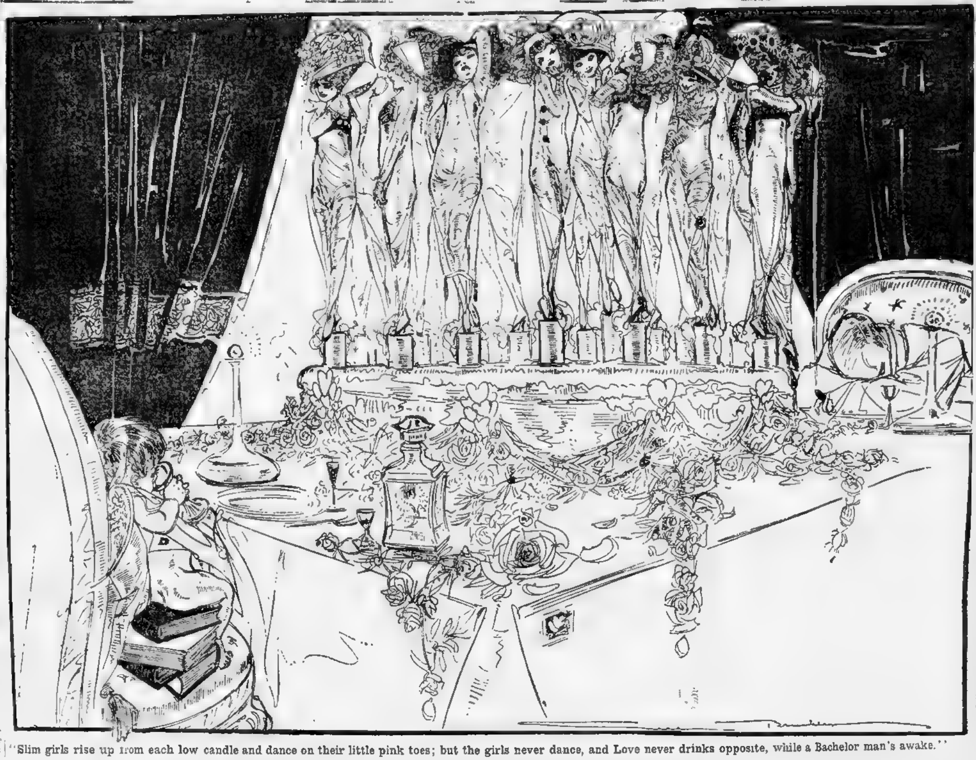
This water would not flow toward the middle latitudes of itself. [illegible] engineers must have [illegible] machinery to pump it and set it running to the places where it can be used. The energy needed to drive the pumps would have to be almost unlimited in amount. [illegible] could not supply it [illegible] vast [illegible] solar engines might suffice to do the work.

The pumps would [illegible] long series [illegible] successive steps [illegible] San Francisco to Boston.

The known flatness of the surface of the planet is favorable to this. The necessity of a continuous succession of pumping machinery offers an explanation of the narrowness of the "irrigated bands" and also explains why they extend to the [illegible].

A glance at a chart of Mars shows the suggestive way in which the lines run, radiating from centres, and covering the entire planet with their network of supposed machinery.

THE BACHELOR'S BIRTHDAY---By NELL BRINKLEY



"Slim girls rise up from each low candle and dance on their little pink toes; but the girls never dance, and Love never drinks opposite, while a Bachelor man's awake."

THE Bachelor man bows his head over his birthday wine and watches the candles sink lower and lower, sending up their flower-petal-like flames higher as the wax falls farther. His lids lift and waver with the lifting and wavering of the yellow flames. Dreams rise like mist in his mind, and the loose rose petal under his crumbling fingers feels like the satin of a girl's cheek.

He had shoved a chair carefully under the white cloth at the other end of the table, and had put wine and a plate and thin glasses there, and the sleek napkin. For a Woman it was—any smiling Woman—the one that had missed him, somehow, among the many twining paths of the world. She might tread softly in, he thought, and slide into her place, and drink with him around the tall, stark candles standing like slender women in rows around his cake.

Then when the candles are sunk into rufflings and puffs of soft wax, the bachelor's head goes down on his arms and his mind is wrapped in a sleep-dark, and his cigar slides in his inert hand, and lifts its thick scent and thread of blue to join the candle-smoke murk. And then Love piles books high in the Woman's chair, and tugs himself up, and drinks with his both hands clasped about the crystal and his fawn eyes gazing over the rim. And the slim girls rise up from each low candle, and dance on their little black toes. But the girls never dance, and Love never drinks opposite while a Bachelor man's awake.

Rebellion

THEY had been married fifteen years. Was it possible to have changed so [illegible] she asked herself, [illegible] long glass.

The girl who had stood before the same glass on [illegible] June morning fifteen years [illegible] young thing, [illegible] cheeks pink as the roses [illegible] garden.

But [illegible] in the eyes [illegible] cheeks that [illegible] sunken [illegible] with gray, [illegible] and mouth [illegible].

And [illegible] fifteenth anniversary of that day [illegible] proposed so much! How young she had been and how ecstatically happy, and how tender and chivalrous he had been!

She quivered, even now, at the memory of how he had taken her in his arms as the carriage drove away from the church.

She had murmured that he would crush her dress and veil, and he had answered —but at the memory of that answer her head went down amidst the silver trifles on the dressing table and a deep, tearless sob shook her slender form from head to f[illegible]

He Had Forgotten It!

And this was the fifteenth anniversary, and he had not even remembered it, but had left the breakfast table with the usual careless nod and good-bye!

Whose was the fault? she asked herself drearily.

For the first few years everything had been so perfect, every anniversary had been [illegible] celebration, and they had so many anniversaries.

He would come home with some pretty trifle and [illegible] it was in honor [illegible] and she would pretend to have forgotten, and say, "What anniversary?" and he would answer, "This is the anniversary of the day we walked in the park and got caught in the rain. We took shelter in a Summer house, and you wore a gray dress and looked like a spring flower, and you were so heavenly sweet to [illegible] really cared."

And she would [illegible] say, "You foolish darling [illegible] everything into an anniversary."

Ah, but she had loved it just the same.

All That Was Years Ago

At [illegible] but after a while [illegible]

As the years [illegible] they had drifted farther and farther [illegible] now they had nothing [illegible]. He was absolutely engrossed by business. He did not even seem interested in their three children.

From Despair to Resolution

"But it has not been all my fault," she told herself bitterly. "He was impatient, and never made allowance for all I had to do for the children. As long as I was [illegible] and he could treat me like a pretty doll he was satisfied. He never confided in me. He thought I was just a child.

"And at the end of fifteen years, where are we? What have we done for ourselves. We are nothing to each other. Our children are growing up with distorted views of married life. They are afraid of their father and they find no joy in me."

She walked the [illegible] of the room impatiently, then struck her hands sharply together.

"I will [illegible]," she said. "I am the one who can save this family, and I mean to try. If it is possible to win back that love, I will do it."

With an excited little laugh she sat down at her desk and wrote four notes.

[illegible] fourteen-year-old daughter [illegible] the room just as the last note was signed. "What has happened? Your cheeks are as pink as roses!"

"Wait and see," was the laughing answer, "and in the meantime, will you deliver these notes?"

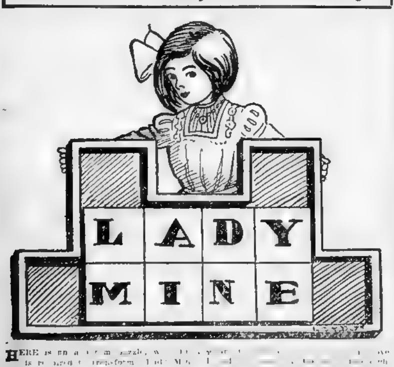
Can You Make "Lady Mine" "Maidenly"?



HERE is an [illegible] puzzle, which [illegible] is required to transform "Lady Mine" into "Maidenly." The idea is to move the eight lettered [illegible] through the medium of [illegible] until the word "Maidenly" [illegible] in the same [illegible] "Lady Mine" now appears.

It is an interesting puzzle, which anybody can work out, but the question is—who can do it in the least number of moves?

The Suffragette

A skin like cream of roses—

But [illegible]

If all her sex were like her,
What tyrant rule we'd get;
But she'd somehow make you like it,
My year-old suffragette.

Some Girls' Ideals

The Tragedies of Divorce

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1909, by American Journal Examiner.

THE condition of society is such today [illegible] the tendency of thought [illegible] independent, that unless the church recognizes divorce society at large will cease to recognize the church, and religious anarchy will ensue.

So soon as marriage ceases to be a holy relation between the contracting parties it becomes an immoral relation.

It is a crime to rear children in a discordant home.

Peanuts and Sleep

RECENTLY a friend who had heard that I sometimes suffer from insomnia told me of a sure cure. "Eat a pint of peanuts and drink two or three glasses of milk before going to bed," said he, "and I'll warrant you'll be asleep within half an hour."

I did as he suggested and now for the benefit of others who may be afflicted with insomnia I feel it to be my duty to report what happened, so far as I am able to recall the details.

First, let me say my friend was right. I did go to sleep very soon after my retirement. Then a friend with his head under his arm came along and asked me if I wanted to buy his feet. I was negotiating with him when the dragon on which I was riding slipped out of his skin and left me floating in midair.

While I was considering how I should get down, a bull with two heads peered over the edge of the wall and said he would haul me up if I would first climb [illegible]

[illegible] I was sliding down the mountain [illegible] and I asked [illegible] when the train would reach [illegible] station.

"We [illegible] your station four hundred years ago," he said, calmly folding the train up and slipping it into his vest pocket.

At this juncture the clown bounded into the ring and pulled the centre pole out of the ground, lifting the tent and all the people in it up, while I stood on the earth [illegible] watching [illegible] go out of sight among the clouds above. Then I woke and found I had been asleep almost [illegible] minutes.—Good Health Clinic.

A Bit of Nonsense

THE women of an Indiana town recently organized a literary club, and for a while everything was lovely.

"Alice," asked the husband of one of the members, upon her return home from one of the meetings, "what was the topic under discussion by the club this afternoon?"

Alice couldn't remember at first. Finally, however, she exclaimed:

"Oh, yes, I remember! We discussed that brazen-looking woman that's just moved in across the street and Longfellow."—Harper's Weekly.

TWO neighbors were recently battling over the club links. All went fairly well, although bogey remained practically intact, until they reached a tee overlooking a pond.

Each drove furiously, then cautiously, a half dozen balls into the muddy depths of that pond.

Standing near by was a little girl, surveying the [illegible]. After the twelfth ball had plunged to its [illegible], she queried, [illegible] sincerely of the golfer:

"Mister, what is the fun in this game?"

HE was gazing with dreamy eyes into the dim, uncertain future.

Charles Henry Meltzer

IF ever it should be my melancholy privilege to write a post mortem eulogy of Mr. Hammerstein—it is much more likely, of course, that he will speak a few kind words about myself—I shall lay special stress upon the service that he rendered art by reviving French opera.

This pious meditation is suggested by the production last night at the Boston Theatre of Jules Massenet's "Thais."

And before we go further I trust I shall be pardoned if (with the authority of an old Parisian) I implore you to pronounce that title "Ty-eess." Two syllables. Almost equal stress on each. With a little more emphasis, maybe, on the first than on the second.

It is so wearisome to hear one's neighbors talking learnedly of "Thayz" and "Ties."

But "to our muttons!"

For years the managers of the Metropolitan Opera Company, to which Boston had grown accustomed to look for its opera, had vowed and protested that apart from "Faust," "Romeo et Juliette," "Les Huguenots" and "Carmen," French opera, or at least French opera that could hope to be palatable to Americans, did not exist.

It was a foolish falsehood and an ignorant one. For if opera lives in any land to-day as an artistic factor it is in France.

New Home of Opera.

From France have come most of the successes of the past ten years in opera. "Louise," "Pelleas et Melisande," "Ariadne," "Le Jongleur," and "Monna Vanna" (to name only six).

And for one work which has found its way to fame in France, ten or a dozen have clamored vainly for the chance of being heard.

When Mr. Hammerstein opened his second Manhattan, he included French opera in his repertory and excluded German music—drama. But at first he gave Italian music the preference. Now, guided by his own taste no less than by the teachings of his box office, he has determined to put his French repertory in the foreground for a season or two.

The Metropolitan has had to follow suit. Next Winter we shall hear much less of Donizetti, and much more of Massenet, Debussy, Dukas and Charpentier.

"Thais" at first drew the "smart" New Yorkers to the Manhattan and repelled the general. The fauteuils in the orchestra were filled. But the galleries, on which Mr. Hammerstein depends largely for his salvation, remained empty.

Multitude Charmed.

Gradually, however, the charm of Massenet's music, the beauty of its interpretation, the dramatic interest of the story unfolded in the opera, attracted the multitude. And now, each time that Mr. Hammerstein gives "Thais" at the Manhattan, he can be sure of a full house.

Massenet wrote this opera over sixteen years ago, for poor Sibyl Sanderson.

He was fortunate in his librettist, Louis Gallet, and in his theme, which Gallet borrowed from a very human novel by Anatole France.

"Tannhauser"—yes, "Tannhauser"—and "The Temptation of St. Anthony" are suggested by the story of the monk, Athanael, who, in striving to redeem the soul of a lost courtesan, loses his own heart and perhaps risks his own salvation.

The subject has the deep and moving interest of all struggles for supremacy between Flesh and Spirit.

It will be just as serviceable for the purposes of a [illegible] century hence as now—ay, or ten centuries hence.

And Massenet, who in the past has often flouted Boileau's counsel "not to force one's talent," showed singular discretion when he composed his "Thais."

Storm in the Lovesick Heart.

With hardly the exception of his "Marie Magdeleine," it is the most serious, if not the most pretentious of his operas.

A sincere work, for more than three or four good reasons, informed with earnestness, uncommonly sincere and marked by that "religiosity," that vague longing for religion, which is so typically French to-day.

From time to time—in the opening episode and in the introduction to the last act—he may seem slightly commonplace. But the comparative dullness of his Desert scene, with its monkish prayers and chants, is useful as a foil to the warm, glowing scenes which follow.

And the turbulent music of that last prelude is meant as a suggestion of the vain storm raging in the lovesick heart of the monk, Athanael.

The beauties of the score, on the other hand, are evident. The solos of Thais, more especially in the second and third acts; the duo of the unregenerate courtesan with Nicias, in the first act, and that other and infinitely tender duo of Thais and Athanael, sung beneath the palms, on the way to the monastery in which the converted heroine is so soon to die, are exquisitely gracious, appealing and eloquent.

The "Meditation," which serves as an intermezzo or connecting link between the conversion of Thais by Athanael, whom she has attempted to seduce, and her departure from the city of which she has been an idol, is a melodic inspiration.

It is written for violin, with a sustained orchestral accompaniment of strings (including a harp), and it is marked by a limpidity no less than by a charm, a morbid elegance, a suavity, eminently characteristic of the man, Massenet, and of his ideals in art.

It is easy to sneer at that "Meditation." But it has meaning in it as well as music, and it may live.

Alive With Melody.

Some years ago Moriz Rosenthal said this to me:

"One of the most wonderful things that can be done in music is to invent eight consecutive bars of melody."

Count the bars of pure, sweet, flowing, unforced melody in that intermezzo in "Thais" before you mock at it.

And there are other passages in Massenet's score which prove the composer's musicianly qualities. For examples, the broad, swelling, exultant episode for orchestra which follows the monk's victory over the sinner and the beautifully written scene immediately preceding it—illustrating the "psychological moment" in the story, when Thais, full of confidence in Venus and her own beauty, pits herself against Athanael and his faith in the God on whom he calls for help to redeem the courtesan.

The pagan and the Christian ideas are admirably contrasted in the music, not only hereabout, but also at other points. Very effective, too, is the recurrence of the "Meditation," in the death scene, which ends the opera.

The chief burden of the interpretation of "Thais" rested last night on two artists of the first rank—Mary Garden and Maurice Renaud.

Both came, were heard, and conquered the vast audience.

It was an audience very different in complexion from that which had rioted and rollicked through "Lucia" with Luisa Tetrazzini.

The Italian music lovers were conspicuous by their absence. As a consequence the demonstrations of approval were less tempestuous and more deliberate than on the preceding night.

From the beginning to the end of the performance, indeed, Mary Garden and her distinguished comrade must have felt that they had to win their applause by unusual efforts.

From the outset the triumph of Maurice Renaud was none the less a foregone conclusion. When, as last night, the great French baritone is in good voice, his art and style, his balance and dignity, his intelligence and taste, are irresistible.

Vast Audience Won Over.

Much of the music which Massenet has composed for Athanael might seem too austere to be wholly pleasing if it were interpreted by a less impressive artist.

As M. Renaud rendered it little or nothing in the part was tedious, while almost everything seemed admirably eloquent.

As a composition this Athanael is consistent and wonderful. Vocally it satisfies, without stirring one to transports of enthusiasm. The hint at the conventional portraits of the Saviour, noticeable in the externals of the monk, were touching, rather than irreverent. M. Renaud had charm and authority in his assumed character.

And Mary Garden?

Bostonians have read much lately of this singer, of her quarrels and misfortunes, loves and enmities.

But it was the artist they had gone to hear and see and weigh and judge last night in "Thais," rather than the woman.

At first, when Mary Garden burst upon them, preceded by dancing girls, and daringly cynical in her attitude, there was a slight tightening of feminine lips in the audience, a disinclination to yield easily to the artist's spell.

The touch of mannishness, of hardness, the suspicion of command rather than of appeal, in the newcomer, told against her here. At the Manhattan they had counted in her favor.

Miss Garden was dressed in a tight fitting rose-hued costume, revealing a bare neck and outlining a fine figure. Her face, more strong that strictly beautiful, was crowned by classic masses of fair hair. And in her hand she held a bunch of flowers which, as she entered, she tossed carelessly to the bystanders and dancing girls on the stage.

But perhaps the most striking peculiarities of the singer were—her walk—her stride—which at moments reminded one of a restless panther, and the movements of her arms, nervous and violent and less Greek than modern.

Intelligence of an uncommon kind, and will and force, were expressed in her acting.

Voice Gained Charm.

Her voice?

In the opening scene it seemed sometimes thin and worn (Miss Garden was recovering from a cold). In the medium it was warm and pleasing. In the lower register it lacked tone. As the performance progressed, and the singer grew easier in her new surroundings, it gained charm and mellowness.

In the last act, when it was most discreetly managed, it had tenderness and beauty. Not, if you will, at best a very great or even a very good voice, but a voice with a strange, haunting, appealing quality in it which, to me and to most others in the house, I think, outweighed its faults.

To judge Mary Garden fairly, one must dismiss the idea of comparing her with coloratura sopranos like Tetrazzini or Sembrich, and treat her as an actress who sings.

As an actress she has extraordinary "magnetism," individuality, and audacity. Unless you had seen her in the last act, you would probably have imagined that she lacked repose. She has that, too, when she chooses, as you will learn in "Pelleas et Melisande."

The transitions from the defiant courtesan of the first act, to the terrified convert and the saintly penitent, were ably rendered by Miss Garden, vocally and histrionically.

Tasteful Costuming.

Her acting in the second act soon changed the defensive attitude of the house to one of sympathy and enthusiasm.

Miss Garden may be doubly congratulated on the success she earned last night for it was won by fighting.

Valles, a pale tenor of small value, sang the role of Nicias, the lover of Thais, while the minor parts of two courtesans were skilfully interpreted by a soprano, "Little Trentini" (as they call her at the Manhattan) and a mezzo soprano named Ponzano.

The costuming of the opera was extremely tasteful. The chorus and the "supers" were well trained.

And the orchestra, under Maestro Campanini, though too often unduly loud and harsh, gave, on the whole, a highly creditable reading of a most interesting and delightful score.

STORY OF TO-NIGHT'S OPERA "La Traviata"

By GIUSEPPE VERDI.

NEXT to "Il Trovatore," so familiar in all lands that the very name almost has been worn threadbare, "La Traviata" is the best known of all the operas composed by Guiseppe Verdi. It was first produced in Venice in 1853.

"La Traviata" is founded upon Dumas's "Dame aux Camelias," well known to the English stage as "Camille." The original play is supposed to represent French life of the period in which it was written, but the Italian libretto changes the time to the year 1700, in the days of Louis XIV. There are also some material changes of character, Marguerite Gauthir (Camille) of the original appearing as Violetta, Olympe figuring as Flora and Armand Duval being introduced as Alfredo.

Story of the Opera.

The story, as told by the librettist, resolves itself into three principal scenes—the supper at Violetta's house, where she makes the acquaintance of Alfredo, and the rupture between them caused by the arrival of Alfredo's father; the ball at the house of Flora, and the death scene and reconciliation, linked together by recitative, so that the dramatic unity of the original is somewhat lost.

The first act opens with a gay party in Violetta's house. Among the crowd about her is Alfredo Germont, a young man from the country, who is passionately in love with her. The sincerity of his love finally influences her to turn aside from her life of voluptuous pleasure and to cherish a similar sentiment for him.

In the next act Violetta is found living in seclusion with Alfredo in the environs of Paris. To support this establishment she has, unknown to Alfredo, sold her property in the city.

When Alfredo discovers this he refuses to be the recipient of her bounty and goes to Paris to recover the property. Alfredo's father, who has learned the secret of his retreat, visits Violetta and pleads with her to forsake Alfredo, not only on his own account, but to save his family from disgrace grace.

Violetta, touched by the old man's great grief, makes up her mind to the sacrifice. She secretly goes back to Paris and resumes the old life of gaiety, leaving Alfredo to believe that she has wearied of him.

The young man is heart-broken. He meets Violetta at a ball given by Flora. He overwhelms her with reproaches and finishes by insulting her, flinging her miniature at her feet in the presence of the assemblage. This takes the place of the scene in the English stage version of the play where Armand (Alfredo) gambles and thinking that Camille (Violetta) has renounced him for a wealthier admirer, hurls his golden winnings into her lap and departs.

Violetta, stung to the quick by her sweetheart's insults and public degradation, goes alone to her little home in the suburbs. Fatal disease has already touched her. Alfredo eventually learns of the great sacrifice she has made for his sake and he hastens to comfort her in her solitary illness. It is too late, but she dies forgiving and blessing him.

Music of "Traviata."

After a short prelude the first act opens with a delightfully vivacious chorus of the guests at Violetta's supper, leading to a drinking song ("Libiamo, Libiamo") in waltz time, sung first by Violetta, then by Alfredo, the chorus echoing with pretty effect each couplet. After a long dialogue between the two, closing with a chorus, Violetta has a grand scena, which is always a favorite show-piece with prime donne. It begins with an andante movement expressive of the newly awakened love which she feels for Alfredo, with a refrain of half a dozen measures in a finale which might be called the "Violetta motive." Then it suddenly develops into a brisk and sparkling allegro ("semper libera") full of the most brilliant and florid ornamentations, in which she again resolves to shut out every feeling of love and plunge anew into the whirl of gaiety. This number, unlike most of Verdi's finales, which are concerted, closes the act.

The second act, showing the country house, opens with an effective tenor aria by Alfredo. In the next scene old Germont, Alfredo's father, appears, and after a short cantabile, sings a duet with Violetta which is full of tenderness. In the interview between Germont and Alfredo, which immediately follows, the father appeals to the son with memories of home in an andante ("Di Provenza il Mar"), which in simplicity and pathos of expression may be almost called a ballad. It is always a favorite, and despite the simple melody, may be said to be the real gem of the opera.

The Ballroom Scene.

The next scene shows the ballroom in Flora's house. It is introduced with a most unusual chorus effect. A masked chorus of gypsies, accompanying their measures with tambourines, is followed by a second chorus of matadors, also in mask, who accent the time with the pikes they carry, the double number ending with a gay bolero. The act closes with a duet between Violetta and Alfredo, developing in the finale by the entrance of Germont into a very strong and dramatic trio.

Violetta's chamber is revealed in the next act. As she contemplates her changed and wasted appearance in a hand mirror, she bids a sad farewell to her dreams of happiness in the aria "Addio! Del Passato." In harsh contrast to this pathetic number is heard a bacchanalian chorus behind the scenes. In the next scene is sung a passionate duet between Violetta and Alfredo, followed by the aria for Violetta, which leads to a concluding quintette and death scene.

Charming Women, in Brilliant Display of Splendid Gowns and Costly Gems, Hear Opera Stars.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Fashion in fullest flower, was a dazzling feature of the second night of Boston's grand opera season. [illegible] splendor of the occasion was such as to suggest that it might be a carnival of gowns rather than of music.

It was not the brilliant audience of the first night; there were not so many fashionables present. Many of the gowns worn at the opening performance were donned again last night, but they were handsome creations and were well worth a second inspection.

The society folk arrived earlier than usual, and when the curtain rose on the first scene they were all seated, with the exception of piquant Dorothy Lawson, who with her escort, rushed in, almost breathless, about the middle of the first scene. She looked more charming than ever before, and, as she walked down the aisle to her seat, she attracted almost as much attention as did the performance on the stage.

She wore a clinging gown of white lace over white satin, a pearl necklace and a corsage bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Marion Lawson came earlier in the evening with her father and wore a vastly becoming gown of embroidered lavender chiffon and a lavender satin cloak.

Vincent Club Girl.

Mrs. Frances D. Amory was a stately figure in an imported gown of [illegible] jetted lace. She was among the earliest arrivals and was accompanied by her pretty daughter, Mary, who is said to be the best dressed and most popular girl in the exclusive Vincent club coterie. Her gown was of palest blue chiffon of pale blue satin. A necklace of pearls was her only ornament.

Mrs. Neal Rantoul was one of the most striking figures present. Handsome, well gowned, distinguished in appearance, she is still very much like the Miss Saltonstall of other days.

The rather severe, though handsomely fashioned black velvet gown, with its touches of white lace about the bodice, was vastly becoming to her decided blonde coloring. A corsage bouquet of pink roses gave just the necessary touch of color.

Miss Rosamond Dixey, wearing a beautiful gown of old rose satin, was one of the prettiest of the younger girls. She was with her aunt, Mrs. Charles E. Cotting, who was in steel blue satin. During intermission she held quite a court in the corridor.

Many Directoire Gowns.

Miss Dorothy Dexter was another of the evening's beauties. She was extremely attractive in a directoire gown of violet chiffon, trimmed with bands of violet satin.

On the left side of the house sat the lovely May Loring. She was with her mother, Mrs. Augustus Loring. She wore a becoming gown of dark green chiffon. Mrs. Loring was in black lace.

Among the all-black figures was Mrs. William Parker, who was in black voile and who had with her her pretty daughter, Alice, becomingly gowned in gray satin and white lace.

Mrs. W. D. Blackmar wore an attractive gown of black satin and lace. She was accompanied by her sister, Miss Fanny Brewer, who was also in black.

Mrs. Robert Morse, whose gowns are always marvels of richness and good taste, was distinuished in black jetted lace and diamonds.

Mrs. Robert D. Evans, in gray satin and diamonds, was one of the statliest of the stately matrons. She arrived early and was accompanied by Miss Belle Hunt, who was superb in black lace and pearls.

Mrs. H. G. Colby wore a handsome gown of violet satin.

Miss Clemence Crofts, known as the tallest girl in Boston society, and towering over the heads of most of the men, looked like a veritable fairy princess such as Abbey would like to pose in a picture of mediaeval England. She was so tall that her clinging light blue satin gown suggested Grecian draperies, and the narrow band of diamonds in her hair seemed poetic rather than smart.

She attracted no end of admiring attention as she chatted with the well groomed and ever affable young giant, Nason Hamlin. Mr. Hamlin is one of the few men in Miss Croft's smart set who can look down upon her. He is, at least, three inches her superior in height.

Tall Bachelors Present.

Grafton D. Cushing, Boston's tallest bachelor, was also there and he, with Hamlin and Miss Crofts, made a striking trio.

Miss Helen Gould was handsome in gray chiffon and white lace, and Mrs. George Shattuck was distinguished in a handsomely wrought gown of black chiffon and black satin.

Miss Gwendoline Holden, one of the Winter's most attractive buds, was in white lace over which she wore a beautiful cloak of old rose broadcloth.

Mrs. Stanley Clemens, who was among the first to arrive, was looking remarkably well in a most fetching frock of pale blue satin and white lace.

In a beautiful pale blue satin gown and old rose cloak Margaret Manning was much in evidence. She arrived rather late and lingered in the corridor till the very last moment, chatting with a group of girl friends.

In a gown of heavy black satin and lace Mrs. Hugh Whitney looked superb.

Miss [illegible] Tyson, with a lovely bouquet of violets snuggled into the duff of her pretty blue chiffon frock, made a most attractive appearance. She was with her mother, Mrs. George Tyson, handsome in white lace and ermine coat.

Mrs. Charles Wheelwright was stately in black chiffon and lace.

Mrs. Francis B. Harrington always [illegible] distinguished was in gray chiffon. She was accompanied by her daughter, Elizabeth, who was in pale blue. Mrs. Robert M. Morse was in violet satin.

Naturally, Mrs. Parker Bremer and those of her party, came in for much attention. Her gown was of violet chiffon [illegible] cloak. She wore [illegible] of diamonds.

Mrs. John C. Baird, who came with her son, Stewart, was in black satin and an ermine wrap.

Mrs. E. W. Thayer wore a stunning [illegible] chiffon.

Miss Grace [illegible] set a pace sartorially [illegible] be difficult for the members of her exclusive coterie to equal. She wore an imported creation of turquoise blue satin, modeled after the very latest Paris fashion. Her jewels were turquoise and diamonds.

Miss Clara Winthrop's gown of old rose satin made a brilliant color note in the maze of white and gray costumes about her.

Miss Josephine Lowell was winsome in a pretty frock of rose-pink chiffon. She was with her two chums, Miss Marion Gray, in violet satin, and Miss Caroline [illegible] in yellow chiffon.

Miss Alice Bowker and Miss Adelaide Jackson, the latter president of the Vincent Club, were two of the best dressed girls. Miss Bowker was in pale blue satin and white lace and Miss Jackson wore flowered black chiffon.

Mrs. Edward Cabot was in black lace over white and Mrs. Taintor was in black. Mrs. Herbert Windlar was handsomely gowned as usual, looking especially well in an imported creation of black velvet [illegible].

Constance Cunningham was with a party of friends and looked dainty and sweet in a prettily modelled gown of deep blue satin.

Mrs. David Cheever, who came with her husband, was pretty and girlish in white chiffon and pearls. Mrs. J. G. White wore mahogany brown chiffon satin.

Others [illegible] gowned were Mrs Henry Grew, 2d, in black lace with diamonds, Mrs. Charles White, violet chiffon and diamonds, Mrs. Roger Sturgis, gray lace over gray satin; Miss Ida Vose, black lace and rose-pink wrap; Miss Nancy Tilley, figured blue chiffon and old rose cloak; Elizabeth Gray, gray brocaded chiffon.

Mrs. Robert Saltonstall, metal blue satin [illegible] satin cloak; Mrs. Eben S. Draper, [illegible] chiffon over white and corsage of pink roses, Mrs. E. M Binner, black net over black satin; Mrs. Samuel Carr, gray lace edged with black; Mrs. Allen Curtis, black chiffon and diamonds; Miss Minna Lyman, dark blue velvet and pearls.

Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., black satin and lace over pale blue; Mrs. Hall McAllister, in black; Miss Helen Stevens, black velvet and pearls, Miss Emily Beebe, gray satin and lace, Mrs. Winthrop Sargent, gray chiffon, cloth and light tan cloak; Mrs. Russell Codman, golden brown chiffon and diamonds.

Mrs. Richard D. Sears, pale green chiffon over green satin. Mrs. Timothee Adamowski, white lace and old rose velvet wrap.

Mrs. Stephen Bennett, gray chiffon over pink and diamonds. Mrs. S. Reed Anthony, pale yellow satin, gold trimmed cloak and gold shoes. Miss Miriam Shaw, pale blue chiffon.

Miss Rosamond Gibson, blue satin and pearls. Mrs. J. S. Lawrence, gray embroidered chiffon over mahogany satin. Mrs. Mason Hamlin, pompadour chiffon. Mrs. Peabody, black lace and diamonds. Mrs. John Laurence, black chiffon over white satin. Mrs. Daniel Frank, black lace.

Miss Mary Perkins, black satin and pearls. Miss Tappan, gray satin. Mrs. Amos Hollingsworth, gray chiffon satin [illegible] corsage bouquet of gardenias. Miss Leda Ormond, pink chiffon and lace, pearl necklace.

Miss Dorothy Bolles, gray chiffon cloth and necklace of corals. Miss Amy Lowell, Copenhagen blue satin trimmed with white lace. Mrs. W. F. Dexter, black pompadour chiffon, and Miss Pauline Webster, pale blue satin and pearls.

Some of the other ladies whose costumes were noted were:

Mrs. William Castle, black voile.
Miss Helen Burnham, white lace and white satin.
Miss Eloise Derby, blue voile over blue silk.
Miss Belle Hunt, black lace and jet.
Mrs. C. E. Cotting, steel blue satin and diamond ornaments.

Miss Ellen Farnsworth, white chiffon and [illegible].
Mrs. H. L. Morse, violet chiffon satin.
Miss Grace Edwards, black chiffon, [illegible] pink rose.
Miss [illegible] Winthrop, [illegible].

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Stout of Andover, Dr. and Mrs. G. [illegible] Shattuck, Mrs. F. L. Higginson, Herbert Windeler, Dr. [illegible], Roger Sturgis, Dr. F. B. THINK GHOSTS FIRED FAMOUS OLD LANDMARK

GLOUCESTER, March 31.—Ghosts, rats and an incendiary are variously accused of the responsibility for the fire which destroyed the famous old Niles homestead at Eastern Point.

Since old Thomas Niles died some years ago and left real estate valued at more than $5,000,000 the picturesque old mansion has had the reputation of being haunted, and scores, including some of the wealthy lessees, have sworn to seeing spooks and hearing mysterious and terrifying noises.

The insurance people, who lose $8,500 of an actual loss of about $20,000, made a careful investigation and are of the opinion that the incendiary, whose torch has destroyed twenty-five Summer residences along Long Beach and the magnificent Summer hotel, Colonial Arms, within the past two years, is once more at work.

The insurance people call attention to the fact that the place has not been occupied for months, and say that rats would not be there, as there would be nothing for them to eat.

The flames were seen from across the harbor and the police sent in an alarm. When the firemen got there some time later, the whole upper stories were gone and all but the ell of the first floor was burned out.

A Woman Butchered by Electricity--and by the People of New York State, and by HUGHES, Governor of the State

A Disgrace to All the Killers

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

Bright and early in the morning, in Auburn Prison, New York, a miserable, half-crazy woman was killed by electricity. This shameful crime against humanity was committed with the consent of Governor Hughes. The people give him power to prevent a disgrace of this kind. The fact that he would not prevent it is a lasting disgrace to himself. We believe that he will live to regret it.

Mr. Hughes has little imagination, of course, or he could not have allowed that poor, ignorant, degenerate woman to be strapped in a chair and murdered. But occasionally the thing will come into his mind. The crime which he allowed to happen ought to disturb even his cold, methodical and selfish nature.

It is true that another woman was killed in the same way with the consent of Mr. Roosevelt. And it is true that Mr. Roosevelt aft"rward became President of the United States.

But, Mr. Hughes, it wasn't the killing of Martha Place that made Mr. Roosevelt President.

You might send five hundred half-crazy women into the electric chair, thinking to show strength of character, and that wouldn't make you President.

Mr. Roosevelt was made President BECAUSE HE SHOWED HIMSELF WILLING TO FIGHT MEN.

What a horrible sight in a "civilized" country! What a blistering disgrace to the people of the State, when that poor, ignorant, demented creature was publicly killed!

The thing is too horrible to dwell upon, but it ought to be burned into the minds of those responsible. It ought to rest heavily upon the consciences of the people of the State who are primarily responsible.

Our reporters were instructed to tell carefully and in detail, for the benefit of those responsible, just what was done to the poor woman. She was a murderess, true. There could be no sympathy for her crime, but there might be pity for the poor, half-witted creature.

Her jailers themselves declared her insane. She was hideous to look upon; in her case there was none of the sentimentality which so often works upon mawkish juries and mawkish Governors. She left a young child behind her, and that child is branded forever, WITHOUT HAVING COMMITTED ANY CRIME.

The woman was waked early in the morning, her head was shaved, her skirts were taken away that the electric wire might reach her leg, then she was dragged into the death cell—with the consent of the people and of the Governor she was shocked to death—then carried out and laid on a table, the top of her head sawed off and the whole of her body opened for the combined instruction and amusement of a collection of doctors.

What will real civilization, what do really decent civilized beings, say of a crime of this kind? Is it not horrible beyond description, shameful, cowardly?

Nothing would have persuaded Governor Hughes to go into that room and LOOK at that crime. He wouldn't have had the COURAGE to stand there and see that woman killed in accordance with his permission. In other words, he did what he would not dare see.

His face would have turned white, his teeth would have chattered behind his brown whiskers; it is more than likely that, naturally a weak man, he would have fallen in a faint as the woman stiffened up and died under that current.

But he had the cowardice, the smallness, to allow the thing to HAPPEN. He has pardoned criminals that were in prison for a number of years, he has shortened the terms of men that were more guilty than this woman. She was at worst a hideous, half-animal, half-crazy, half-responsible creature.

And Hughes allowed her to be butchered in this shameful way.

Why did he do it? Because he knew that Roosevelt had done the same thing. Mr. Hughes wanted to show that he had the fine courage of Roosevelt. Mr. Hughes hoped to arouse admiration. As a matter of fact, when he imitated Roosevelt in this case of killing a woman, he was like some dunghill rooster imitating a gamecock. You can't blame Roosevelt for enjoying any kind of death. That's his nature. But you CAN blame a dunghill rooster for going out of his way to kill vicariously when it isn't his nature.

The woman is dead—the best possible thing for her. Her miseries are over. The defective brain, the bad education, the lack of opportunity, the dwarfed mind, did their work. Then came along our vile civilization, that tries to correct one murder with another murder, and then came the Leghorn rooster, Governor Hughes, imitating the Roosevelt gamecock, and then the miserable, shameful scene in the death chair.

The thing is over. But we assure Mr. Hughes that it will come up to disturb him. He is an ambitious man, and his ambition, itself distorted, ignorant, is the very thing that allowed this woman to be killed in order that HUGHES MIGHT IMITATE ROOSEVELT.

We beg to inform Mr. Hughes that he will regret this crime against decency and against civilization. He is the second man in the world to allow a woman to be publicly murdered by electricity. He is mistaken in his idea that he will be the second man that murdered a woman subsequently becoming President.

One thing more, Mr. Hughes. You will have trouble and sorrow in your family. When sorrow comes, just remember that you wouldn't lift your finger, you wouldn't use the power that the people had given you to save a poor, miserable creature that never had a chance, from the most shameful death. Remembering what you did in Auburn should make you remember that you will deserve whatever you get in the future.

Clark's Novel, "Loaded Dice," American's Next Serial

THE BOSTON AMERICAN has arranged with the Bobbs-Merrell Publishing Company to publish a condensed version of Ellery H. Clark's great novel of Boston life, entitled "Loaded Dice."

Mr. Clark, as every Bostonian knows, is a lawyer of high repute and Harvard's crack all-around athlete. He has written a really great story—one of the most popular selling books of the day—and it will be given in serial form only in the AMERICAN.

The first installment of the story will appear in the evening AMERICAN on Saturday. Everbody in Boston should read it.

The Secret of Bad Luck

By Winifred Black

"GO back and count ten," said a friend of mine to me the other day. "If you don't you'll have bad luck all day." So I went back after the package I had forgotten; and I sat down and counted ten before I dared to leave the room.

And all day long I had bad luck just the same.

I left my muff in the street car, laid my purse on the shop counter and came within an ace of forgetting it; passed a sensitive woman of my acquaintance by with a cool stare, instead of a friendly nod; found a letter with disagreeable news awaiting me, and almost quarreled with my best friend because she said my brand-new hat looked like a vegetable colander, and I looked like the cook when I had it on.

I wonder what brought me the bad luck?

I believe that every one of those old signs and proverbs means something real—if we'd only look deep enough into them to find out what it is.

It is unlucky to forget something and have to go back after it.

How can it help being unlucky to be absent minded?

I started out on my bad day in an absent-minded humor, and the very thing that made me go back to the house after I had started made me leave my muff, forget my purse, neglect my friend and take offence at a bit of friendly criticism.

There was nothing wrong with the day, but there was a great deal wrong with me.

The bad news in the letter upset me terribly. But when I came to read that same letter over again the next day there wasn't anything so particularly distressing about it, after all.

The day wasn't different from the day before—but I was different.

I wonder how much bad luck and good luck, happy days and sad days, have to do with anything on earth but our own hearts and our own dispositions.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

FAVORS THE REFERENDUM

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I certainly favor the referendum and am opposed to the proposed new charter. Why? Though an humble citizen I feel that I have the right to choose the form of government best suited to my condition.

This charter would take all authority out of the hands of local representatives, leaving certain communities unrepresented, and proves in more than one way that it is an incentive to those who are inclined to autocracy.

Centralizing the power of government into a new collective body means, to my mind, the taking away of the personal rights of the voters. This charter would soon breed a distrust among the voters.

To abolish the Common Council as it is, is to abolish home rule. This certainly would not make Boston a better city; and to abolish home rule is to destroy local pride.

Charlestown, for instance, is unrepresented in the Board of Aldermen. Should the abolition of the Common Council become a fact Charlestown would be placed at a still greater disadvantage.

We have our representatives in the Legislature, it is true, but they are not so closely allied to the people and to the individual voter's interest as are our Councilmen.

This new charter is unsafe. It is un-American and un-democratic. It will no serve the best interests of the people as whole.

Give us the referendum.

What we really want is home rule not the mockery of absolute monarchy.
